

The Daily Post.

PITTSBURGH: FRIDAY MORNING, JULY 8, 1864.

THE SIXTY-SECOND REGIMENT.

This gallant old regiment, which three years ago entered the service over a thousand strong, under the gallant Col. JACK, yesterday returned to this city with less than two hundred of its original number.

That the Administration arrested VALANDIGHAM last summer, in order that the outrage would insure his nomination for Governor of Ohio is no longer concealed; they knew his opinions regarding the rebellion, and his position of hostilities were not shared by the great body of the Democracy of his State.

In that respect performance the Administration was successful; they fooled the gallant Democracy of Ohio into the performance of a foolish act, it is to be seen whether they can repeat their operation.

But like the generality of public men who have had their day, Mr. VALANDIGHAM has followers still, who cling to his faded fortunes with all the tenacity of a sincere affection.

When the Democratic party has already put itself upon the record, regarding VALANDIGHAM's treatment, his case is no longer disposed of.

THE SEASIDE FIGHT.

Further Particulars of the Engagement Between the Kearsage and the Alabama. The following is the extended report of the battle between the Alabama and the Kearsage.

The Alabama and the Kearsage were engaged in a battle on the 19th of July, 1864. The Alabama was commanded by Captain Semmes, and the Kearsage by Captain DeBow.

The Alabama was a Confederate ironclad, and the Kearsage was a Federal ironclad. The battle was a tactical draw, but it was a significant event in the history of the American Civil War.
