PITTSBURGH SATURDAY MORNING, JULY 9, 1864

BATURDAY MORNING, JULY 9, 1864 THE PRATE CAPTAIN SEMMRES. The dare-devil Semmes - whose pirate-ship, the Alabama, was for nearly three years the terror of thaseas, causing more construction by the boldness of her depredations, than ever were reported of the Red Rover or the legendery Flying Dutchman-is now luxuriating in Southampton, under the ample pro-tection of our cousin Bull. We see it tatted, that our Minister at France, Mr. DAYTON, has forwarded some impor-tant dispatches to Mr. ADAMB, our Embassador at England, upon which he is to demand the surrender of SEMMES. The Abolition press, we perceive, is devastation.

The Abolition press, we perceive, is rather cautious in counseling the Ad-ministration what to do; but still there is but one opinion as to the right of our forths city, speaking more from impulse, of this city, speaking more from impulse, than calculation, utters its honest con-victions, as to the duty of our Govern ment, it says: "Every' feeling of resard for the Nation's "Every' feeling of resard for the Nation's ment, it says: "Every' feeling of regard for the Nation's II honor calls upon the United States (Bovernment to demand the surrender of these pirates from II the English Government. They are upon Eng-lish soil, through English contivance and inter-ference against us, just as the Alabama was per-mitted to go to sea in the first place through the connivance of the English Government. We trust the Administration will at once demand the prinoers this bloen from us, and that no un-worthy fear of involving this country in a war with English firmly, in this instance, and rigidly exacting the regard which one nation owes to another in such cases."

SEMMES, will act as it has acted since Gazette writer speak: the rebellion began, precisely as the English and French Governments suggest or dictates. When the rebel envoys, SLIDELL and MASON, were captured by one of our vessels and handed over to the Government, our Administration declared its purpose to hold them at all hazards; but a demand for them, couched in imperative terms, from the English Minister, caused their immediate release. This was a most humiliating act upon the part of our

MR. The Administration, in this case of SEMMES, will act as it has acted since Gazette Writer speak: A draft, with commutation, was found to be unavailable, while a draft, without commuta-tion, was depreciated by all eight-minded men ara measure frightfully oppressive, a measure to des-points to be thought of even in this great nation-al extremity. • • To avoid total failure the speen kowered first to France, and potic to be thought of even in the second total failure [1] al extremity. * * To svoid total failure [1] on the one hand and intolerable oppression on the other, Congress wisely fell back upon the volunteer system, regulated by assessed quotas stimulated by bounties, and enforced under the penalty of a draft without commutation. * Man must be had; but we have learned from avanetiences that a draft, with commutation, will
