PILES OF

TWENTY YEARS STANDING

CURED.

Below will be found a certificate from one of the most respectable citizens of Wilkins township in regard to Dr. Keyser's Lindsay' Blood Searcher. The Doctor's certificates are within reach, and no one need be deceived in regard to his preparations.

DR. GEO. H. KEYSER:—I became affected with Piles about twenty years ago, and every year they were growing worse, so as to trouble me very much, so much so at times as to unfit me for work. Sometimes I was so bad that I could not do anything on account of them, they came on me as large as a hickory nut. I had tried a great deal of medicine for them. I used to buy and take whatever I could hear of or read of in circulars and pamphlets that fell in my way, but I could not get cured, sometimes they would do me some good for a little while, but afterwards they would return again as bad as ever. I also applied to Physicians who visited me, many times and gave me some medicine but it would not do. I could not get well. Over a year ago I got an advertisement of your Lindsay's Blood-Searcher, made by yourself—when you sold it to me you told me one bottle would cure me, and that my whole system would have to be renewed by the medicine before I got well. I bought one bottle and took it home with me and used it according to your directions. I then called on you again, when you said I could n expect much benefit from one bottle. I bought from me bottle at a time, until I had used five bottles. After this quantity had been used, I was entirely well of the Piles, which had tortured me for twenty years. In other respects my health is improved, and I am as well as could be expected for one of my age, being sixty years past. I have been well now for six months, and there is no appearance of a return of that dreadful disease; I can do a days farming work now without the Piles coming down and hurting me. I can go in the hay, chop wood, lift, or do any kind of work which before used to hurt me. Now I attribute all your Blood Searcher. I keep on taking it until I get entirely well. I consider it my duty to make my case known to the country for the benefit of others who may be suffering as I was—and do not know the cure of your medicine. You may publish this to suit likes—I live in Wilkins Township, and will be pleased to satisfy any one of the truth of this certificate if they wish to call on me.

Look out the name of DR. GEORGE H. KEYSER on the cover of the bottle and pasted over the cork of each bottle of the genuine Lindsay's Blood Searcher, before you purchase any. It is the most expensive article which is in the market.

NOTICE TO ALL CONCERNED.—Among a certain class of selfish unprincipled people there is a peculiar feeling of bitterness attended to all physicians that advertise and treat the diseases named in this card, (PRIVATE DISEASES,) why this should be, they nor no one else can tell. Are they not aware that all physicians treat diseases of every denomination, in fact solicit just the very diseases that are so obnoxious to these very refined parties. I suppose they would not let one of their family go to a party that has devoted years for their benefit, because he advertises the fact, and their family physician would be a humbug so he can get the case. Often he has almost deprived the party of his life. He comes at last to the physician that advertises—he does are they to know? Are they not aware that Sir Astley Cooper, Sir Benjamin Brodie, Sir Charles Hall and M. Paul Ricord devoted years in the treatment of these diseases? These men are held up as shining lights in the medical world; I don't assert that all men are worthy that publish, still there are a great number of them that are. I have devoted myself to the study and treatment of PRIVATE DISEASES upwards of 40 years, and without egotism can say I have saved hundreds from years of misery and untimely death. My treatment is confined to the Vegetable altogether, as I think it is the best and most certain. It is in my power to bring hundreds of certificates if I thought it necessary to certify to my general success; but my long residence in this city is sufficient proof without adding more. Spermatorrhœa and all diseases arising from it are cured in a much shorter time than heretofore. It behooves every young man and woman to be careful in selecting a physician. The different advertisements that are seen in our papers are of no worth, and no benefit will arise from answering it other than only loss of health and money. Hundreds are cured annually by my new remedies. Address BOX 500, Pittsburgh Postoffice.

Truth Stranger than Fiction.

Crimes of European Aristocracy.

Seduction and Desertion by a Member of a Royal Family.

The Lady is sent to America to Hide Her Shame—Deserted by her Loyal Lover—She Becomes Insane—The Victim now in the Kings County Lunatic Asylum.

It is an old adage that truth is stranger than fiction, and although to the lovers of yellow covered novels, and romantic literature generally, the maxim may be overstrained, yet certain it is that under the smooth current of civilized social life, events float along infinitely more strange and romantic in their character than the wildest dreams of the most imaginative novel writer, and it is only by the merest accident that those events come to the surface, sometimes to startle all by their strangeness; and the following melancholy tale of misplaced affection and its unhappy consequences which came to the knowledge of one of our reporters a day or two since, is one of the events of that character. About two weeks since there was received into the Lunatic Asylum at Flatbush a young and charming woman, richly dressed and bearing about her all the evidences of refinement and intelligence, who was reported as a most desperate maniac. She was brought there by two of her brothers and a sister-in-law, who desired that the utmost care should be taken of her, as they were willing to pay for everything that was necessary for her comfort, and if possible for her recovery from the dread malady under which she was laboring. The unfortunate young woman is still an inmate of the county asylum, and the following simple sad truthful recital of the causes which led to the present wreck of her mind, possesses a melancholy interest far exceeding the most heart-rending combination of fictitious events and wicked wrongs ever conceived, by the mind of the novelist.

Louisa Thomet, the unfortunate young lady in question, was born in the town of Liege, on the borders of France and Belgium, her father being a wealthy burgher of the town, and she having inherited in her own right an amount which made a princely fortune in the town of her birth. During her youth she was taught all the accomplishments which young ladies in her circle of society, in Europe, are expected to possess, and at the age of eighteen she was not only on account of her accomplishments, but for her personal beauty, which was of that peculiar kind that does not strike at first sight, but is more the reflection of inward than the reality of outward beauty, considered the most attractive of all the beauties of her native town, and no ball or party was considered complete unless it was graced by her presence. About six months after her entree into society, Louisa, at a party one evening, met a young man, who was introduced to her as Monsieur Prosper Girandon, a sculptor by profession. Louisa had imbibed, with her other accomplishments, a love of painting and sculpture, and between her and Monsieur Girandon a friendship sprung up, which soon, on the part of the young lady, ripened into a love bordering upon idolatry, and she had no happiness, except in his presence, and he in his turn became her constant attendant in her walks and at her residence.

One day, about six months after the commencement of the intimacy, Louisa was summoned from her room to receive a visitor—a lady closely veiled, who after a few preliminary questions, asked her if she knew who her affianced was—for by this time it was understood among her friends that Louisa and the unknown sculptor were engaged to be wedded. Louisa told what she knew of him, when the stranger, throwing up her vail, and disclosing the features of a beautiful woman, informed her that the man on whom she had bestowed her affection was no sculptor, but, was in reality no other than the Count de Flanders, the heir apparent to the throne of Belgium, and, moreover, that his pretended affection for her, was only meant to accomplish her ruin, and warned her against him. The poor girl could not believe the tale, and hastily dressing herself, she ran to the lodgings of her lover, to hear from his own lips the truth or falsity of the tale. To her astonishment the quondam sculptor acknowledged the truth of the story, and urged, in extenuation of his deception, his love for her and the necessity of concealing it from political motives. He told her that he meant to marry her, and in time elevate her to the throne, and, instead of the friendly warning of her strange visitor having had the desired effect, it only served to increase the poor girl's love for the Count, who was now, under his own tuition, dearer to her than he had ever been as the sculptor, and the consequence was that the princely villain succeeded in his design of robbing her of her virtue under the promise of marrying her as soon as certain political obstructions were removed.

From time to time, the marriage was put off, and finally the condition of the girl became so that to conceal her shame any longer would be impossible, and then her seducer, who still kept up the mask of honest love, proposed to her to come to this country, and remain with her child, until after the birth of the infant, after which the marriage would take place, he promising to meet her on the borders of France, to escort her to ward off the inquiries in relation to the condition of the young lady which might be made in a strange land, it was arranged that a brother of Louisa's, who had been taken into their confidence, and supposed the intention of the Count to be of the most honorable character, should accompany her, and pass for her husband; and about the beginning of May last Louisa and her brother arrived here as man and wife, and took up their residence with another brother, who resides at present in the Eighth Ward of this city. During their stay here Louisa and her supposed husband were introduced to a large circle of society, and many of those who were charmed with the refined manner and dashing accomplishments of the fair and fascinating French woman little dreamed what a dark cloud was lowering over her future. About six weeks after her arrival here, the looked for crisis came, and the child, a fine, healthy boy, was born. And the young mother, as soon as she began to be able to sit up in bed, began to indulge in the fondest anticipations of a speedy reunion with her lover and the restoration of her good name.

About five days after the birth of the baby, a letter addressed to Louisa, in the well-known handwriting of her lover, was received by her brother, and he, supposing that it contained the looked-for news of the appointment of a day for the marriage to take place, and a place for the meeting, joyfully rushed up with it to his sister's room, and threw it in her lap. She hastily snatched it up, with a beaming countenance, and after reading for a few moments uttered a heart-rending scream, and immediately fainted; a physician was sent for, and her brother, on reading the letter, discovered that it was to the effect that, for State reasons, the marriage would have to be postponed for three or four years. When the poor girl recovered from her swoon, it was only as a maniac. The sudden revulsion from joy to sorrow had destroyed her reason and plunged her, in the most frantic manner, on being taken to the St. Nicholas Hotel, where she believed her affianced was waiting to receive her, to take her back to his princely home. An eminent physician was sent for and he prescribed a soothing draught, which was administered to her in the hope that by a heavy sleep her reason might return. During the absence of her attending physician the unfortunate young woman administered some of her medicine to the baby, and she finally became so violent that it was found necessary to have her conveyed to the lunatic asylum. After her departure, the child took sick, and died on the following day, and the fact having been noised about that the unfortunate lady had given her own medicine in mistake, it was thought the case was one which called for judicial investigation, the coroner was notified to hold an inquest on the body.
