EPICURE. The Late Invasion.

The reports from Maryland that the rebels have left the State and recrossed the Potomac will be received with satisfaction by the public generally, as indi-cating that General Early has abandoned his proposed invasion in torce. Pre-suming the reports to be correct, it by no means follows as a necessity that this interpretation of their significance is the interpretation of their signal care is the light one. We are still completely in the dark as to what the rebels meant to do, or are now doing. If this seem-ing advance was but a feint to allow them time to transport their booty to in a great number of lurid jets, similar to those of a large mass of pig iron at a Richmond, then it has proved most sucwhite heat under the triphammer, ex-cept, instead of flying in sparks, they cessful, deceiving not only our people, but our military authorities as well. But were in continuous streams. All this was the work of only an instant. Near there are still reasons for suspecting that something more than this was em-braced in the idea of the enterprise. May ly the whole regiment was stunned and blinded. Many lay shocked to insensiit not be that the retreat now reported is itself a feit? Or may it not be that bility. A whole six mule team, at a dis tance of twenty yards, were thrown Early, failing to be reinforced from Hickmond as promptly as he expected, has merely retired to the Virginia side of the Potomac until such reinforcements
