LOCAL INTELLIGENCE. PRTIMY MORNING, SEPT. 2 1884. Miners Again. The miners held a mass meeting of last Monday at Braddock's Field. The meeting was largely attended, and they seemed to look on the existing state of affairs with unusual interest. They could not but know that in this strike the people take the part of the mining companies, especially and the latter are doing all in their power to decrease the price of coal during the strike. After due consideration they adopted the following resolutions.

"That the present employers, by a continued series of vile usurpations and encroachments."

ir a "That the present employers, by a continued series of vide usurpations and encroachments specifically the rights of a free people, have longitied and the result pure to claims and confidence. That we present the consideration of some practical plan for making more uniform, practical plan for making more uniform, practical plan for making more uniform, the practical plan for making more uniform, practical plan for making more uniform, the practical plan for making more uniform, and the department of what political faith or opinion they may be, and that we will support those who support in."

From this it would appear that they are highnome unknown reason, which they express under the general terms "usurpations and en-" They do not seem at all desirous of surrendering and will probably hold out yet for some time. We understand that the companies are making arrangements to induce la-Sorers from the East to replace the diggers. A larger number of laborers could readily be had or the wages which the miners were wont to receive, and if they were only assured by some responsible person that the offer was in good faith, ourcity would in a short time be amply This would hurt the feelings of the ners no doubl, but necessity obeys no law, andhere we must have either one party or the other, because coal must be had.

A Great Accommodation.—An entirely new and important system of postal delivery is about being insugarated, by which letters for any place between Washington, Baltimore, Philadelphia and New York, or to points immediately diverging from that line of travel can be deposited in the letter-boxes of the mail oar up to the very moment of its departure. Hie was the son of Mr. John Chouse, a well-known and estimable citizen of Johnstown. Lieut. It is mourning comrades can all bear testimony to his bravery as a soldier and his kindness as an officer—and after three years' faithful fighting, his death was embittered by the mocking manifesto, of the Prestleut, declaring that the contest had not been for the Union, but for the 'overthrow of Southern slavery!
