If the Abolitionists succeed in electing a constable in the remotest township in New England, it is suddenly teledorsement of their candidate; but the terrible battles, under Burnsides and most popular and enthusiastic uprisings of the people in favor of McOlellan, are never even alluded to.

Throughout the whole Union, in all the cities and large towns of the loyal States there were held on Saturday last immense McClellan meetings to celebrate the anniversary of the adoption of the American Constitution. Notwithstanding the importance and significance of this glorious event, not an allusion was made to it by telegraph, from any quarter. In New York and Phila. delphia these demonstrations were unparalleled in numbers and enthusiasm, sure harbingers of still more glorious demonstrations at the polls in November The New York World and the Philadelphia Age, are crowded with the spirited proceedings of these respective demonstrations. The most striking and gratifying features of these popular demonstrations were the two leading speakers who addressed them; in New York one was no less a personage than Hon, Robert C. Winthrop, once Whig Speaker of the United States House of Representatives, and in Philadelphia the leading speaker was Hon. Emerson Etherldge, of Tennessee, late Whig Clerk of the same body. Those acquainted with the stand ing of these two gentlemen in the old Whig party know what immense power they wielded in that organization. Mr. Winthrop was, perhaps, the most accomplished Speaker that ever presided in the House of Representatives not even excepting Henry Clay, He was the idol of his party, as well as the favorite of the great Kentucky statesman.

What is still more, Sam has remained at home, receiving nice pay and rations for doing nothing. But before starting for the army he must of course make a speech for Lincoln, which he expects to procure for him not only promotion in the service, but another furlough when he desire it. So

Our army is of immense size, but it is doubtful if it could be larger than 500,000 men cannot be main tained out of a population of twenty-three millions of people, and still keep the necessary occupations agoing which the wants of such a population require. Instead, therefore, of seeking to keep up overgrown armies, the attention of the Government should be directed to settle the foundations of the temples have, by srming them with the most and bulwarks of the dearest rights of efficient weapons, and training soldiers how to use them with the most effect. Rifles are the most certain in execution of all small arms, but then men should be taught to fire with them accurately by frequent practice. Without this skill in their use, rifics are no better than other guns. Half the time that is devoted to teaching the manual of arms, would make our soldiers excellent marksmen,
