To the West.—It is wonderful to see the large numbers of emigrants who are arriving from the East.

A considerable number remain in this city, and are waiting for the season to open.

Our Losses on the 19th. New York, October 26.—The Herald's correspondent with Sheridan, writing a respite after the late battle.

Report of the U.S. Sanitary Com. From the Shenandoah Valley.

Gen. Early Gone to Richmond. Desertions from the Enemy.

Jeff. Davis' Columbia Speech. Extracts from Richmond Papers.

New York, Oct. 26.—The Commercial Tribune publishes the report of the U.S. Sanitary Commission concerning rebel barbarities to our prisoners, which occupies over three columns.

Affairs in Sheridan's camp have settled down to comparative quiet, although parties of cavalry are still out in various directions picking up stragglers.

It is said Early succeeded in retaining but 10 pieces of artillery. Prisoners and persons living in the Valley say Early and Longstreet have gone to Richmond with as many men of their corps as was saved after the defeat.

Only a small portion of the rebels in the vicinity of Mount Jackson, remain behind. The entire loss of the rebels in killed, wounded and captured, is now reckoned at about 10,000. Ker's division went into the fight with 22 new brass pieces of cannon just finished at Richmond. Sheridan bagged 20 of these guns.

The Herald's special of the 9th corps says: "A shot has been discharged upon our front for the past two weeks. The pickets on the right of each other preserve the utmost quiet. Desertions from the enemy still continue, and every day from two to six come into our lines and bring the usual stories of great defeat and our comrades."

General Custar visited Newark on Sunday and returned to the army on the same day. He says the victory of Wednesday was the most complete and decisive yet achieved in the Shenandoah Valley. Before the charges of our army, the rebel forces scattered in confusion, throwing off everything that could impede their flight.

In the early part of the day the advantages were with Early, and had been content with capturing our guns and eight hundred prisoners, and in driving his army from its position, his victory would have been complete. Our men and cannon were all effected before sunrise. The enthusiasm of our men after the defeat of the enemy is described by Gen. Custar as magnificent. Their confidence in Sheridan is so great that an army one-third larger cannot stand before them.

Jeff. Davis' Columbia speech is published here this morning. It contains no points of great significance. It says at the close: "I believe it is the power of the men of the Confederacy to plant their banner on the banks of the Ohio, where we may say to the Yankee: 'Be quiet, or we shall teach you another lesson.' Within the next thirty days much will be done, for upon our success much depends. Within the next thirty days, therefore, let all who are absentees, or who ought to be in the army, promptly to their ranks."

The Richmond Examiner of the 21st says: "The lines below the city are as monotonous as ever. The heavy shell, of Dutch Gap continues, and it is evident that Grant is waiting on Lee. Lee's victory would have been a shell to retard the work on the canal, unless he expected some serious demonstration of the enemy to follow its completion."

The enemy keeps up the fire upon Sumter and Charleston. We may soon expect to have our eyes turned from Charleston to Wilmington. Porter's fleet ought to have reached its destination some days ago.

The Montgomery Advertiser says: "Some believe that it is Hood's intention to keep up towards Chattanooga, destroying the Georgia State railroad to Dalton, when, having Sherman confined in Atlanta, he would cross Lookout mountain and strike for Middle Tennessee. Others believe that the army will turn to the left at Rome and strike for Greenville."

A correspondent of the Enquirer with Mosby says: "From the 1st of January to the 1st of October, Mosby killed and captured sixty-nine Yankees for every man he lost."

The Sentinel of the 23d has a long article on the effect of protracting the war, and says: "If we are not able to command a speedy peace by a vigorous blows, we are, at least, sure of final success by patience and perseverance."

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 26.—The Bulletin has the following special dispatch: "Advices received here from Chattanooga of the 25th, announcing the capture of Captain McManus of the 13th Penna., recently a captive of Reading, and of Captain Hale of the 18th Penna., while on their way from the front to this place. Both are excellent officers. On Saturday a party of one thousand prisoners came in from Atlanta where they have been since the taking of that place."

BOSTON, Oct. 26.—The British prize steamer Nunda, from Wilmington for Nassau, which was captured Oct. 21st by the United States steamer Fort Jackson, when 160 miles from port, arrived here today in charge of acting Ensign Hopkins and a prize crew. Ninety-eight shots were fired at her before she was rendered, 25 hales were thrown overboard during the chase of 6 hours. She is a side-wheel iron steamer, 630 tons burthen, and draws seven feet of water.
