Adam Smith ("Wealth of Nations," book V., chapter 2,) describes the Span-ish alcavela as "a tax upon the sale of every sort of property, whether mova-ble or immovable; and it is repeated every time the property is sold." After describing its operation he goes on to say: "It is to the alcavala, accordingly, that Ustaritz imputes the ruin of the manufactures of Spain. He might have imputed to it likewise the declension of agriculture, it being imposed not only upon manufactures, but upon the rude produce of the land." In the kingdom of Naples there is a
