AMERICAN HOTEL.—Corner of Smithfield and Third Streets, City of Pittsburgh, Pa.
JAMES S CLARK, (formerly of the Reed House, Erie,) Proprietor.

The interior of this House is entirely new, together with the Furniture. The House is large and commodious; bed rooms and parlours are pleasantly situated, being light and airy, fronting on two streets, which is a desirable object to those that put up at a Hotel. This House is situated in the midst of the business part of the city, within two squares of the regular Steamboat Landing, and in the same Block of the Stage Office of the different Lines of Stages. Passengers putting up at the above named Hotel, and wishing to take passage in either of the above lines, by making their intentions known, can have their seats secured without any trouble or inconvenience to them. Likewise those who are going by Canal or Steamboat can be conveyed with their baggage free of expense, to any of their places of departure. Persons traveling in carriages, or private conveyance, can at all times find good Stabling at the above named Hotel.

This house is situated so very close to the new Court House, that those having business at court, will find it a pleasant stopping place. From the subscriber's long experience as a landlord, and from his full determination to keep a quiet and well conducted house, he fondly trusts he will make the sojourn of his guests pleasant and agreeable; and believing in his old motto, which has generally been favorable—an attentive landlord and make reasonable bills—he most respectfully asks a share of public patronage.

☞ Boarders taken by the day, week, month or year. sep 10

NEW HOTEL.—The subscriber respectfully informs his old friends and the public that he has opened a Temperance Hotel, in Fifth Street, near the Exchange Bank, and in the house lately occupied by Mr. Thomas Patrick, and has hoisted an Iron Sign, "The [illegible] City Hotel," where he will be very happy to accommodate all who may please to call on him. The table shall be provided with the best fare, and every possible accommodation to town and country customers and travelers.

A few boarders [illegible] can be taken, and [illegible] can have their [illegible]

He has large and good stables and [illegible] Oats, and a good Hostler, [illegible]

NEW LIGHTS.—The Home League Lamp! Highly Important to the Public.—The Subscribers, Agents for Carey's Patent Lamps for burning Hog's Lard or other fatty substances, have just received a quantity of the Lamps, to which they would respectfully call the attention of the public. They are peculiarly adapted to the present hard times, as it becomes all parts of the community to economise in all things, and in offering their Lamps to the public the subscribers feel fully satisfied, and are ready to satisfy the most incredulous that in using their Lamps there is a real saving of at least 50 per cent. over any other Lamp now in use, and a certainty of having a light equal, if not superior, to that obtained from the best Sperm Oil, and, unlike the Camphine, there is no danger of explosion, and the construction is so simple, that it requires little or no experience to keep them always in order. We would most particularly call the attention of people living in the country to examine these Lamps, as we feel satisfied that there is scarce a family that does not annually waste lard and grease enough to keep them constantly with the best light, if applied to these Lamps, whereby the whole expense of oil and candles would be saved. We would invite all to come and examine for themselves that they may be satisfied that there is, nor can be, no deception, as it is our object that every one should be fully convinced of their utility and superiority over all other lamps now in use, as well as in regard to the superior light they give, as to the great saving, as we do positively assert that forty cents worth of lard will burn as long and give equally as good, if not better light, than one gallon of the best Sperm Oil, which will cost $1.50; farther, there is no smoke or disagreeable smell arising from the burning of lard, which cannot be said of Oil, or that abominable and dangerous stuff called Camphine Oil, or Spirit Gas.

☞ Most oil lamps now in use can be altered as to burn lard, which alteration the subscribers will make at a reasonable price. They will also purchase second-hand lamps, or exchange the lard lamps for them.

EVANS'S CAMOMILE PILLS.—ABRAHAM J. CLEMER, residing at 66 Mott street, New York, was afflicted with Dyspepsia in its most aggravated form. The symptoms were violent headache, great debility, fever, costiveness, cough, heartburn, pain in the chest and stomach always after eating, impaired appetite, sensation of sinking at the stomach, furred tongue, nausea, with frequent vomitings, dizziness towards night and restlessness. These had continued upwards of a twelvemonth, when, on consulting Dr. Wm. Evans, 100 Chatham street, and submitting to his ever successful and agreeable mode of treatment, the patient was completely restored to health in the short space of one month, and grateful for the incalculable benefit derived, gladly came forward and volunteered the above statement.

JONES & COLEMAN,
sep 10 St. Clair st., near the Allegheny Bridge.

LARD OIL.—The Subscriber would most respectfully inform the public in general that he has an article of Lard Oil of a superior quality, manufactured at the Cincinnati Oil Manufactory by R. W. Lee & Co., which is warranted to be equal to the best Sperm Oil, both for Light and Machinery. This Oil is entirely free from any glutinous matter, smoke, or unpleasant odor, and it is as clear and white as spring water. Not a particle of crust is left on the wick. The light is pure and brilliant, and will last as long, if not longer, than that from an equal quantity of Sperm Oil. The subscriber informs the public that he has taken a place nearly opposite the Post Office, where he will light up several different lamps every evening, and he would respectfully invite the inhabitants of Pittsburgh, Allegheny, and their vicinity, to call and judge for themselves. He feels confident they will be convinced that the above statement is perfectly correct. Out of two hundred individuals who have tried the Oil, there has not been a single fault found with it. The Lard Oil costs one third less than Sperm. He would respectfully solicit the early attention of Dealers and Machinists to the above.

The following Churches are now using the Lard Oil:
Second Presbyterian Church, Pittsburgh,
New Cumberland Presbyterian Church, Pittsburgh,
First Presbyterian Church, Allegheny City,
Associate Reformed Church, do.
All the barrels are branded R. W. LEE & Co. Cincinnati, Ohio.
M. C. EDEY, Agent.

Pittsburgh, June 21st, 1842.

We, the undersigned, Captains of the Express Line of Packets, on the Pennsylvania Canal, have tried and are using an article of Lard Oil introduced here by Matthew C. Edey, and manufactured by R. W. Lee & Co., at the Cincinnati Oil Factory.

We are confident in asserting that the above is equal to the best Sperm Oil; that it is entirely free from smoke or any other glutinous matter whatever; the light [illegible] perfectly pure, clear and brilliant, and will last as long, if not longer than that from an equal quantity of Sperm [illegible]

Mourn not the daughter fading:
It is the common lot,
That those we love should come and go,
And leave us in this world of woe:
So, murmur not!

Her life was short, but fair,
Unsullied by a blot;
And now she sinks to dreamless rest,—
(A dove, who makes the earth her nest;)
So, murmur not!

No pangs, nor passionate grief,
Nor anger raging hot,
No ills shall ever harm her more;
She goes unto the silent shore,
Where pain is not.

Weep'st thou that none should mourn
For thee, and thy sad lot?
Peace, peace! and know that few e'er grieve
When Death, the tyrant, doth increase
Life's little knot.

E'en thou scarce wept must fade!
It is the common lot,
To link our hearts to things that fly,—
To love without return,—and die,
And be—forgot!

BARRY CORNWALL.

[From the Democratic Review.]

Anecdotes of General Jackson.

BY AMOS KENDALL.

Public men often suffer great wrong in reference as well to their private as their public character and conduct, from the misrepresentations of their political adversaries, frequently aggravated by personal animosities. Individuals of a party who mean to be honest, and would not in word or thought intentionally do injustice to a human being, often believe, with a too ready credulity, the assertions of party [illegible] and personal enemies, thereby becoming accomplices in the infliction of injuries at which their own consciences, if properly instructed, would revolt with horror.

The opinions imbibed by a large portion of mankind in reference to the temper and conduct of General Jackson in his personal relations, furnish a striking illustration of these truths. Multitudes there are, both in United States and other countries, who, having received their impressions, without due consideration, from presses and persons opposed to him, believe that distinguished man to be reckless of religious faith, if not of moral obligation, ferocious in temper, and in all the relations of life a tyrant. Such individuals will learn with astonishment, that this picture is all the reverse of truth; that the tone of Gen. Jackson's mind during his Presidency was decidedly devout; that no man could be more kind and indulgent in all his private relations; and that if he be censurable on this score, it is for too much forbearance. With what pain he found himself compelled to give up his favorable opinion of old friends, and with what tenacity he clung to them, in many cases, after everybody else pronounced them venal and treacherous, was witnessed by those who were intimate with him during his administration. But without touching at present upon anything connected with his political course, I propose to give in the present and in some succeeding papers a few authentic anecdotes which will tend to correct the erroneous opinions entertained by many as to his religious impressions and imputed violence of temper.

Those who sat down with Gen. Jackson at his private table to break bread, know with what fervor he uniformly invoked the blessings of Heaven upon the repast provided by its bounty. A stranger could not witness the scene without according to the venerable man before him, who thus bowed his grey head in humble supplication to the Giver of all good, a heart sincerely religious.

All will remember, that toward the close of his administration the General was attacked by a bleeding at the lungs which threatened to be fatal. Nor will it be forgotten that some of the party presses attributed this attack to a violent fit of passion, in the paroxysms of which, they said he had [illegible] the real scene presented, I [illegible] from the mouth of an eye witness. The cruel fabrication had reached the members of the President's family, and from the lips of Mrs. Jackson, the lady of the General's adopted son, rendered unusually eloquent by the indignation which lighted up her beautiful face, I heard the following narrative:—

"Father," said she, "is in the habit, every night before he goes to bed, of calling me in to read to him a chapter in the Bible.—On that night, having finished his business, he called me in to perform that service. I read to him as usual, and having finished the chapter, received from him an affectionate good-night, and retired to my bed chamber, which was in an adjoining room. He then called the servant who usually attended on him in his chamber, and was undressing. Suddenly he called [illegible] and entering the [illegible] found him bleeding at the mouth. What produced the attack I know not; but certain it is, that so far from indulging in any outbreak of temper, his mind was calm and devotional, seeking to close the business of the day by communion with heaven."

The practice of reading or listening to a chapter of Holy Writ and sending up fervent aspirations to Heaven every night before he retired [illegible]

[illegible] A portrait of [illegible] earthly affections [illegible] "Is that a [illegible]" [illegible] in my presence [illegible] what not so good [illegible] ture from his bosom.

On another occasion, calling on some urgent business, I [illegible] to his bed chamber, I found him [illegible] up. The curtains in front of his [illegible] open, and he lay with his head [illegible] elevated on a pillow. Opposite [illegible] his bed, nearly touching the post, stood a little table, and on it was the miniature of Mrs. Jackson leaning against a [illegible] and a Prayer Book which had been [illegible] It was evidently so placed that he [illegible] he lay, gaze upon the shadow of [illegible] ed features which had enraptured his youthful heart, and contemplate those [illegible] which, in old age, and even death, [illegible] ed them dear to the bosom of the [illegible] statesman beyond any other earthly [illegible]

I was not then so thoroughly [illegible] with Gen. Jackson as I afterwards became, but on witnessing this scene, I said to myself, this must be a good man. None other could entertain so deep, enduring an affection for a departed companion, however cherished while living. Love like this is all good, all heavenly, all divine, as nearly as anything on earth possibly can be. It cannot dwell in a bad heart; it cannot assimilate with a perverted mind.

I had never seen Mrs. Jackson; but from that moment I pronounced her a superior woman. None [illegible] could so fix the affections of such a man. None other could maintain such a hold on such a mind, amidst the enjoyment of glory, the gratification of ambition, the cares of state, and never-ceasing excitements sufficient to overpower and swallow up the kindly affections of ordinary men.—None other could occupy, in life and in death, so broad a space in the remembrance and affections of one who in devotion to his country never had a superior. And I could not but regret, that she had not lived, not so much to enjoy a signal triumph over her own and her husband's traducers, as to comfort, advise, and sustain her devoted companion in the midst of never-ceasing toils and vexations, the heartlessness of false friends, and the assaults of [illegible] enemies.

Who that visited the President's House during General Jackson's administration does not remember Jemmy O'Neil, the Irish doorkeeper? Jemmy was kind-hearted, but blunt in his manner; so much so, on some occasions as to appear rude if not [illegible] Often one might ring the bell [illegible] after time, and no Jemmy make his appearance. There was a particular [illegible] Jemmy's apparent rudeness [illegible] absence.

Calling one day, upon business, I rang the bell repeatedly, but no [illegible] appeared. As I had done before under like circumstances, I opened the door, and walked up stairs to the President's office. [illegible] I found the General and Major Donelson. Presently the bell rang again, again and again. "Where can Jemmy be?" said the General. "Drunk, most likely," replied Major Donelson. I then stated that I had not been able to raise him, though I had rung until I was tired, and [illegible] the first occasion. Major Donelson then observed, that this difficulty was now of almost daily recurrence; that he had, on several occasions, found Jemmy [illegible] wholly unable to get to the door, [illegible] not so disabled, his conduct [illegible] was often, from his peculiar situation, anything but polite or respectful [illegible] pressed the opinion [illegible] that a more suitable person should be entrusted with that duty. "Well, well," said the General, we cannot bear it any longer; tell Jemmy he must find a home elsewhere.

Again and again I called, and Jemmy [illegible] presented his rubicund face at the door [illegible] not befitting his [illegible] Donelson; "[illegible] that Jemmy [illegible] said the [illegible] each [illegible] eral [illegible]
