The Slanderer of Female Charactes

It is in character with the Clay Whigs to honor the calumniator of female resutation. No better evidence need be offered than the neeting held at the Museum, on Friday evening last by the friends of Mr. Clay.

We recommend our readers to peruse the following extract from a letter published by Jonathan Roberts in the Democratic Press, August 14th, 1827. Extract of a Letter from Jonathan Roberts to Samuel

A Post Office Case.

In a Justice's Court at Schenectally, a few days since, the Postmaster of that city brought an action against Mr. John Foster, to recover a penalty of $5, for an alleged violation of sec. 30 of the Post Office Law. The defendant, sometime in the month of July last, mailed at the Post Office in that city a Catalogue of Union College, directed the Principal of Springville Academy. On the first page of the pamphlet was written the words, "with respects of J. Foster." It was contended on the part of the prosecution, that the words thus written was a violation of the 30th section of the act, and the defendant therefore hable for the penalty of $5, prescribed by that section. On the part of the defendant it was inwisted that the words as written was not a violation of the act-that it was not a memorandum within the spirit of that section. Secondly, that if it was a memorandum within the meaning of the 30th section, there was no evidence that it was made there with the intention of having the same conveyed free of letter postage. The case was fully and ably argued by the counsel for the respective parties, and submitted to the jury, who returned a verdict for the defendant. The same jury by their verdict, in another case found that the words, "these wix pages stereoty ped," written on a proof sheet and directed to the author of a work, subjects the same to letter post-

It is sufficient to show the weakness of this manœuvre, to say that turer nearly ten yeurs ago, and FIVE YEARS cublics is proverbial, and here was a palpathat paper. How would the editor of the Gazette per for one in specie. If we must have in 1832, and his Mentor would not then admit antimasonic articles into the Gazette? They would undoubtedly think it very unfair so to treat them and their paper. Or if we were to insist that Mr. Considerable damage done in the harbor Craig is a Jackson man, (as he once was) in spite of all he might say and do to show the contrary, would be consider himself fairly dealt with? Undoubtedly not. And yet the Gazette wishes to make the editors of the Post accountable, not for their own views, but for the views of other men,

> But what is the article quoted after all. It is nothing more nor less than the Compromise policy, which was afterwards carried out by Clay and forms the crowning glory of his political life. And the editors of the Gazette, in denou icing the article quoted, well knew that they hurt the Clay Whigs more than they did the Morning Post.

As to the insinuation that our article of yesterday was intended to "blind the eyes of the people until after the election"---we cast it back with unmingled scorn. A man who, being an unrenouncing mason, assumed control of an antimasonic organ, without defining his position in regard to mesonry, should hold his peace about "blinding the eyes of the people!" We have rarely met with an act of more unblushing impudence.
