CORRESPONDENCE.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 26, 1842.

How, W. W. Inwin, Dear Sir :- At a meeting of the friends of Presi dent Tyler held in this city, the undersigned were deputed as a committee to invite you to accept a public dinner, as a slight testimonial of their esteem for you personally, and admiration of your course in Congress during its last session They feel that this manifestation of regard is due to you by your fellow citizens of Pennsylvania, as a distinguished member of the "Corporal's Guard," whose labors in defence of the President from the unjust and malignant assaults of the adherents of Henry Clay, have entitled it to the applause and gratitude of every republican in the Union. destroy the character of a man whose whole life give evidence of political honesty, consistency, and patrionism, and to degrade him as an imbecile, the most violent and wicked measures, and the grossest vituperation and slander were recorted to, and the country agitated throughou with alarm for the public safety.

In this trying time we recognize you as standing by the side of the President, unmoved and immovable, and constantly exerting yourself for the public good. Much is due to you for saving the Tariff Bill, and for settling the agitations cre ated for political effect. To show our esteem for you personally, and our admiration of your conduct, we invite you to join the friends of the President, at a festival, to commemorate the victory obtained by patriotism over faction and political gambling. We at the same time tender to you the assurance of our personal respect.

PHILADELPHIA, 27th Sept. 1842. Gentlemen:-I have received your very police letter inviting me to partake of a public dinner, which I would be proud to accept, were I not obliged to leave your city to-morrow morning. A long absence protracted by the illness of my family, has rendered it necessary that I should lose no time in repairing to my home, and I must therefore content myself with thanking you for this manifestation of your esteem, and with expressing to you my sincere and hoartfelt gratitude for the kind terms, in which you have conveyed your approbation of my course in Congress.

riven in all sincerity, and from a belief that I was

1040, I, with others, had solemnly and repearedly declared to the American people that our medicate for the Vice Presidency, John Tyler with ul to the Constitution." In proof thereof, we referred, not to loose declarations in casual intercourse, or to private conversations, easily misunderstood or forgotten, but to the written history of his life; to his public and official acts; to his recorded votes and opinions, on all the great questions of national policy, which, in a long eries of hears, had agitated the country. I say, that Mr. Tyler's opinions, acts and votes were well known to those who brought him forward and who vonched to the people for their correct ness, and they were easily accessible to all. The archives of the nation disclosed them. I was one of his vouchers to the people, and when, by a dispensation of Divine Providence, the lamented patriot Harrison was called hence from his labors. derply as I deplored the melancholy event, THAT did not make me for one, regret my instrumentality in raising up a successor in John Tyler That did not make me unsay what I had said BE. EDRE THE ELECTION. I saw no reason then to change my opinion of the man. I have seen no reason since to change it, but much to confirm and strengthen it. I thought then and STILL think what I, with others, had so often declared before the election that John Tyler is "honest," is "capable," is "faithful to the Constitution." thinking, so believing, I lay claim to but little credit for not uniting with those in whom private griefs, disappointed avarice, or ungratified hopes may have wrought a change of sentiment, or timulated, with an unslaked thirst for vengeance to the fiercest invective, and the wildest denunciation. On the contrary, my aid, fceble as it was. was given most cheerfully to the support of President Tyler, who, surrounded by difficulties and subarrassments, and doomed to a cruel persecu tion such as rever fell, in the fiercest of party strife, to the lot of any predecessor, with a bankrupt treasury and without a party, has sustained himself and his administration thus fer, with triumphant success; settling the most serious and delicate questions with foreign nations on an honorable and permanent basis, and maintaining the rights of the American people, their peace, honor and dignity, both at home and abroad. An ade. quate tariff of duties on imports has been providd; which, while it furnishes revenue to defray the ment and gives a wholesome stimulus to the languishing and prostrate labor of the country will, it is thusted, now that it has been disconnected from all other measures, meet with the approbation of the whole people, and stand secure upon the permanent basis of its own merits. For this most desirable and salutary measure the country is deeply indebted to the firmness and consistency of the President. It is not his fault that anothe great measure, often and strenuously urged by arm upon the consideration of Congress, has not yet been adopted, providing for the collection, eafe-keeping and disbursement of the public revenuce, and at the same time, a sound, a uniform and a universal currency for the people. It is to be hoped that the day is not distant, when more mislity of sentiment, between the Legislative and Executive Departments of the Government will lead to the accomplishment of a result se desirable. Above all things, it is to be desirthat hereafter, both this question of the cosmovemend that of the TARTY shall cease to be the at of party politicians, and that the communi will be permitted to enjoy the needful repose. be manimity of centiment prevailing smonget he marehers of all parties of the Pennsylveni

Section Boats.

One of the objections that has been urged against the "Truck system," is that the section Boats would not carry a sufficient quantity of freight to remunerate the transporter for his labor. We have been assured by persons engaged in the business, that this is not the fact, and a reference to the amount of freight carried by this class of Boats, will shows that the objection is untrue. A single instance will suffice:

"Conequenessing Valley," Capt. Karns, departed for Philadelphia, from the ware house of C. A. M'Nulty & Co., with a ear-

Making in all 176,200 lbs. This is the greatest load ever carried in a portable boat, & we believe there are but few canal boats of any kind, capable of carrying more. The price of transportation on the flour is twenty cents per barrel cheaper than was charged by the combination lines, and on Glass ten cents per box. This will make a handsome saving for the shippers, and still afford the transporter an abundant reward for his

In this fact the public can see the great advantages that must follow to shippers, transporters and the state, in the adoption of a system that will give individual enterprise an opportunity to embark in the for warding business. In this single load the owners of goods, save over eighty dollars, by patronizing the single boat in preference to the large combinations of capitalists, and the enterprising boatman, after paying tolls and all other expenses, will realize upwards of a hundred dollars clear profit. The advantages of this system will beyond a doubt bring an immense increase of business to our public works, and we predict without hes. | graphs." itation that when it is in complete operation You have been pleased, gentlemen, to refer to itation that when it is in complete operation my support of Mr. Tyler's administration. It is a mystery to us how some men who work hard for their daily bread, can allow themselves to be gulled by a party, the leaders of which publicly proclaim "from the house top" that they are in favor of a property qualification for voters, and for the very sage reason that none but property holders have any interest in the welfare of the country.

What profound Political Economists!-To assert that men who depend on the prosperity of the country, for their own bread, have no interest in its welfare! "He who giveth to the poor, lendeth to the Lord," is a pious incentive to charity, and a more worthy object for the exercise of this divine virtue cannot be presented to the benevolent, han the one suggested by our correpondent: FOR THE MORNING POST.

Charity.

I have somewhere met with a beautiful little sketch entitled 'The Ladder of Benevolence,' pur porting to be a translation from one of the aucient Hebrew sages, which specifies eight differ ent degrees or steps of charity, each of which is more perfect and meritorious than the preceding. At the present day that which is placed at the foot ladder and ranks lowest in the scale of merit-'Ostentatious Charity,' cems to be the favorite; set poor, and a few scattering pennics or at most dimes, are deposited serving merely to point out how few there are benevolent at hear; but insttute a Sale or Fair for the same purpose-wealth, beauty, and fashion, are enthusiastic in Ith course-all become rivals in the extent of their benevolence and all are most liberal. The seventh step in the ladder is specified as that charity which bestows in so disinterested a manner that the relieved object and the benefactor are generally unknown to each other. And the eighth and most meritorious of all is to anticipate charity-name. ly, to assist the reduced brother either by a considerable gift or loan of money or by leaching him a trade, or putting him in the way of business so that he may earn an honest livelihood and no be forced to the dreadful alternative of holding up his hands in the highway for charity.' This con tinues the writer I have quoted, is the highest step and the summit of charity's golden ladder and to this Scripture alludes where it says, 'Anif thy Brother be waxen poor and fallen in decay with thee-then shalt thou support him; yea though he be a stranger or a nojourner.' The object of this communication is to call the attention of those persons who are disposed to 'Anticipate Charity' by assisting to save their fel low creatures from the necessity of holding out their hands to beg, to a society instituted for this purpose hitherto eminently successful, which is gent Females ever since the period of its organization some two years ago has been mainly instrumental in the support of from 80 to 100 poor families, and which without their aid, must be reduced to absolute beggary or starvation. The plan of the society is to use a capital raised from donations, in the purchase of materials for clothing, for the making up of which the industrious poor in their employ receive the scanty pittance which is their sole support.

The articles made up are sold, and the money again vested i.. the same manner or during the winter distributed in the shape of fuel, groceries, &c., to the sick.

Thus none derive benefit from it but the worthy-those who are unwilling to live on the bounty of others without laboring when they can so support themselves -or those whom sickness has rendered unable to work. In order to accomplish at 10 o'clock, A. A. A Court of their ends the society is obliged to employ a superin endent-and rent a suitable sales room; the payment of the salary and rent of room, they are dependent on the liberality of the public, and unless the generosity which has heretofire been their encouragement now hastens to aid, they will be obliged to force the sale of the goods at present on hand, for the payment of expenses, and discontinue their usefulness.

The depot of the society is at the corner of Ce are necessary in every family, their prices are quite as reasonable as at any establishment where he same kind of articles can be procured-and yet the greatest drawback to their perfect success is the difficulty in making sales. The excellency of their cause seems to be no advantage-can i be for the reason that the benevolence which induces persons to patronize the establishment is -too unostentatious to be fashionable?unseen Surely if there is a charity pure as that inculca. ted in the precent of Him who e charge was 'let not thy right hand know what thy left hand doeth,' it is comprised in the top step of the 'Golden' Ladder' and who can point out a surer or a purer mode of bestowing than in the encouragement of a society which 'Anticipates Charity' by the prevention of absolute want.
