It is now well known that the Brandreth Pilis liave cared thousands of hopeless and belpless persons, ever when the first physicians had pronounced them beyone all human means of relief. It is now not only well known that the Réandreth Pills so cure, but it is also understood how they cure; that it is by their purifying effect or the blood that they restore the body to health.

The value of the medicine is becoming more and more manifest, it is recommended daily from family to family.

be sere to call upon me." You are certainly very kind, Erskine said, really impressed with the prompt aphad a consciousness all the while, that he should be made to reciprocate to his heart content. During the morning, he half his two notes conveyed to the discount boxes of two different banks, whose boards sate ris on the succeeding day. Then came houts of den in their several callings.

Terms.—The Post will be published on a large imperir n he knew was not esteemed to be rery sound. His paper was of the quantity called 'weak' in the market, and never passed unless strongly bolst red up. But, us he was a new applicant for bank favors, and was known to have a rich father in law, he thought that his notes might pass the ordeal. His sleep during that night was trief and roubled, for his payments on the next day were heavy for one of his business and resources. Unrefreshed he arose in the more ning, and repaired to his store, to a sail, in increasing anxiety, the hour when he chould know the result of his application for a loss. At last it was accertained that one note had been thrown out and the other discounted. The relief experienced from the proceeds of one note, was of so much moment to him, that he bore the disappointed of hive ing the other returned with quite a philosophic air.

On the next day he succeeded in getting that one discounted also. He was now comparatively easy. The proceeds of these two notes, carried him along in his payments quite comfortably. About a week after his application to Cameron, that individual returned his professional call.

One good turn they say deserves another er,' he said, laughing, as he came up to the desk where Erskine was standing. You lall of the Marthorough Chapel, in Boston, on Tuesday. were so kind as to accept my enfortement a few days ago, and now I wish to refurn the favor by asking your name to this little bit of paper.

*Certainly, certainly! For how much in it?' responded Erskine.

'Only for fitteen hundred dollars." The note was of course indo sed. As Erskine thought at the time he was writing his name on the back of the bill, that only the beginning of a dan of business. Before three months had expered, he had endorsed for Cameron to the mount of ten thousand dollars, and Cameron for him to the amount of six thousand. The notes had not all passed through bank, but the money had been raised upon them, and not a ways on the most lavorable terms ---These operations had the effect to make Er skine's business go as smoothly as he could wish for a time. But his bills for furniture etc. now began to fall due, and he was again. at his wit's ends for the means whereby to meet his engagements. Borrowing money to be returned in a few days had been resarted to, and found to be a very troublesome and worrying business. He had:

become involved in this to a perplexing extent-borrowing to day to pay one friend; and tomerrow to pay another, and on the next day to meet a note. It was towards the close of the first year of his marriage, that Erskine found it impossible to keep up, without some sid from his father-in law .- Several of Cameron's notes, which had fallen due, that individual had toung himself unable to lift. Of course Erskine had to raise the emount to prevent his own name from being dishonored. His own accommodation paper the bank refused to renew, unless be would give them some better inderset But one way to eave himself presented it self; and that' was to go to Mr. Allison. The time for making use of that long sontemplated resource, had now fully come, and, accordingly Eiskine waited upon his father-in law, and made known his wishes That is a thing I have never, in my life, asked of any man, was the reply. 'I have seen so many men ruined by indorsing for others, that I have steadily presisted in neither asking por granting such a favor. But I can assure you, Mr. Allison, that there is not the slightest danger in this case, urged Erekine. My business is a most excellent one and my stock and good' accounts will realize double what I owe.

Is your name on any one's paper! This question Brekine had expected and he made up his mind to answer No. and he did so accordingly, with a prompt ness that depeived Mr. Allison. 'How much do you want?' My heaviest payments fall due this month; and I must have at least nix thous sand dollars more than my sales sad sol lections will realize. After that, I shall " be as easy as an old sine;
