The most aware of any role of official duty that for bids a compliance with your request, but of the contrary it seems to me congenial to the spirit of our institutions that those to whem the powers of government are entrasted should on all proper no-casions, and when it can be done without interfarence with official obligations, be willing to the an account of the execution of their trust 16 who ask it is the spirit of fair inquiry. Although it would give me the greatest pleasure to great you and myself by a personal wirit, for the proindicated by you, yet my duties at the seat. Government forbid an absence so protracted extent. I shall endeavor therefore to comply waits of a personal communication; which, I trust, will be Bearly if not quite as acceptable. The policy of the administration is indicated by the measures which the President has adopted when the power rested with him, or has recommended to Congrees when legislation was necessary sary. Its general scope and aim have been, equaland exact justice to each and every portion that interest of the whole country. He takes these that terests as he finds them, secured and protested as the Constitution and laws, and his greatest please one consists in his greatest duty, to opholo and the sintain that cons us by our fathers, and to execute the laws in their fair and full force and spirit.

The course of the Administration of President Tyler can not be understood without adverting to President of the United States Land Co. the history of its commencement.
