Such facis as the above serve to admonish us of the wrongs which are entailed upon mankind by bad legislation. Life not, as many appear to think, merely because the English people are under a mouarchical upon them; for in this Republic, where almost every man has "a voice potential in the affairs of state," we was by adopting the same laws, reduce ourselves to the same consent, while here, men's wrongs are sance titled by their votes.

What is it that in England has raised a few to princely wealth, and reduced the mass to penury? Names of Places. The editor of the Boston Yankee Naion undertakes to prove that we are a poetical people, from the fact that we have 17 towns called "Montgomery." The good people who named these towns were perfectly guiltless of any desire to glorify the poet Montgomery. It was the gallant General Municamery, who fell at Quebec, that they sought to honor.

By the way, we may mention as a proof of the exalted esteem in which the Hero of the Hermitage is held by his fellow citi zens, a fict stated in the Nation's article There are 96 towns in the Union called after Washington-and 77 called after Jacks n; there are 62 Franklins, 44 Monroes, 53 Jeffersons, 36 Madisons, 43 Waynes, &c., and but 14 Adamses, and 13 Hamiltons. If this made of doing honor to our distinguished dead be indicalive of the position they have in their countrymen's esteem. Jackson occupies the second place; and his fame is yet in its youth. Adams and Hamilton, it will be seen, give name to but few places in the country. The proportion, however, correctly shows the small space they have in the nation's
