You may use the bell, or the rapper, or both; and then an old woman. (genera'ly,) ca'l d a concierge, opens the door, inquires what you want, and directs you up the stairs to the floor where you will find your man. When you get to that floor, you find several double doors all shut, with a bell-cord at each; and you ring again, perhaps at the wrong door. A servant comes and points to the right door; and when you have found the right place, you have, perhaps, two or three little apartments to pass through, before you come to the parlor or receiving room.

Those of our readers (says the New York Morning Post.) who have had the pleasure of perusing Mr. Stephen's Travels in Yucatan, published some time since by the Harpers, will remember il e curious account which is there given of what the author call 'a living city,' by which is meant a city inhabited by a people who are entirely unknown to the test of the phens professes to have derived his information from a priest, who related that when a youth; he had climbed to the top of Mexico, saw a large city covering a large spot of ground, with its walls, and palaces, and turrets glittering in the sun-The priest then went on to say, that the traditionary account of the neighboring Indians - of Chagril, for instance - was that no white man bad ever reached that city that they murdered every stranger who attempted to enter their territory, that, they sedulously kept from all intercourse with those around them, that they med no coin, were in possession of no catthe or domestic animals, and that they held the secret of the history and fate of the populous race that once crowded the lost and dilapidated cities that are scattered over the surface of Central America.

The Unknown Nation of Central America.

When we first read this account of Mr. ohens, we were inclined to regard it, either as an exaggeration of the good padre, or as a wild and worthless tale of some Indian impostor. But we find on reading the recent work of Mr. Norman. that he more than confirms the statement of his forerunner. It appears, moreover, that the French traveler Waldeck conversel with some of the inhabitants of this Instead of being useful citizens they bemonastic city. Norman, as it will be seen come drones -mere consumers of the proby the following passage, speaks of such a duce of honest toil-and, not unfrequently city, as though there could be no doubt of way, and that not generally known. No one yet, who has had the boldness to follow the inhabitants to their wild retreat, lessly extravagant, the masses of laborers has ever returned to render an account of his journey. The inhabitants are represented as speaking the Maya and Tchole languages, and many of them as conversing well in Spanish. From the latter circumstance, they are enabled to visit the neararticle they cultivate, and afterwards to return to their retreats. They are constituted of the Lacandrons and other savage athletic, and very ciuel. They are worshippers of idols, and their religious cerimonies are said to have undergone little or no change.

Palanque is in the neighborhood of this settlement; and Waldeck, who says he has conversed with some of these people, understood that they had white persons a mong them-but whether they stay volun tarily, or are detained as prisoners, he has not mentioned. The same nation is spoken of by Mr. Stephens. Their number is estimated at thirty thousand; their secluded mode of life makes it almost impossible to respecting them. The Indians of Yucatan and the neighboring provinces have been seen in conversation with persons from this district; they, however, appear to know as little of the peuple of whom I speak as others. Could a friendly intercouse, by any possibility, be established with this surprising country, there is scarcely a doubt that a complete knowledge of the former inhabitants of the immense ruins scattered throughout the provinces would be revealed. That their temples and records remain in safety, and are capable of speaking to posterity, there can scarcely be

Warning in Season.

Every city in the United States is now period. crowded with men, young andold, who are without any visible means of earning an honest livelihood. Notwithstanding this, we find young men, who have an ample competence to make life a pleasure, abandoning the farm houses of their fathers, in vain hope of enjoying a life of happiness in a city. How delusive? The only men who can be truly called independent are farmers; farming is laborious, it is true, but world. Of course the prisoner's counsel will gain much credit for their shrewdness in shielding a villain from punishment, which will be regarded as a professional laurel! After Alexander is sent forth to do more murder, if he will the court and lawyers who accomplished it, will no doubt gravely talk of the corruption and venality of the press!

> DEATH OF THE SHERIFF OF PHILIADEL PHIA COUNTY.

Henry Morris Esq., Sheriff of Philadelphia, cx pired very suddenly on Thursday afternoon. He had suffered for some time, from a dis-asc of the tions of the heart. He was greatly harrassed by his onerous official duties, and by the importuni ties of real or pretended friends who were clamorous for the few official favors at his disposal. He was passing, with his Deputy, Geo Norton, from the Sheriff's Office to the Office of his counsel, Mr. Meredith, when he was seized with a painful feeling of the heart. At the S. E corner of 7th and George streets he halted for a moment or two to inhale the fresh air blowing up 7th street from Washington Square, faneying that it would relieve him. Feeling faint, he placed his le't hand against the south wall of the buildings at that corner-then suddenly tottered and fell. Mr. Norton caught him in his arms just as he reached the ground. Matthew H. McEwen, and N. P. Sullivan, who were standing near in George street conversing, and two wood sawyers who were at work within a foot or two, ran up, and assisted Mr. Norton to carry the Sheriff into "The Presbyterian Publication office. They placed him on a chair and despatched messengers for medical aid. He expired, however, before they returned.

The Coroner, Mr. Brelsford, was sent for, and declared it his duty to hold an inquest over the body EThis was objected to by Dr Morris, a brother of the deceased, who is said to have treated Mr. B. with much disrespect, and to have used violent language to him. > TREMENDOUS STORM! SHIPWRECKS AND LOSS OF LIFE

Boston papers of Thursday give an account of a dreadful storm which visited the harbor at that place on Wednesday night last. It commenced about 6 o'clock and continued until 2 o'clock on Thursday evening. The Post says that more than a dozen ressels had been sunk and the crews of some of them had perished. The Post says: Perhaps no gale that has visited this place for some time has destroved so much property in so short a time. We fear that a few days will unfold tales of shipwreck and death along our coasts, that will bring pain and sorrow to many a bereaved bosom.

We have taken un notice of the damage on the land, but undoubtedly it is considerable-for nothing fragile, exposed to such fury, could escape unscathed.

The Forthcoming Message.

A Washington correspondent of the Boston Post who appears to speak of matters knowingly, has the following remarks on the character of President Tyler's message. which will be sent to Congress to-

"By certain immaterial alterations, it can be made to approximate very closely to the independent Treasury. He will advise such modifications of the present tarotherwise challenged, while in scarcely a liff as may produce greater revenue, with less opprobitious inequalities and excesses. and will adhere in principle to the terms of the compromise act. He will also, besides other suggestions of public import, recommend that justice, though so late, be done to the claims and reputation of a former distinguished public servant."

Taking it easy. - The editor of a coon paper in Michigan has been put in jail.-He has placed a cut, a gloomy looking grated window at the head of his editorial column, and dates his articles "in jail."-He seems determined to make the most of his new situation; drives the horrors of the prison off by laughing at his persecutors.

He says: - 'As for ourself, we expect no bail, but we will not repine. Instead of writing nights after having wasked hard all day, we now have the whole time .-We hope to see our friends any time they are disposed to call, and any testimony of their regard will be grate fully received."
