Assumption of the State Debts. The advocates of the old Federal doctrines have been so long under the displeasure of the American people, and have found an open and honest course in politics so hopeless in advancing their rotten principles, that they have become systematically sly and hypocritical, in all their

They are now covertly engaged in the grand scheme of an Assumption of the State Debts by the General Government. This invention is of pure federal parentage, having for a precedent the financial plan of Hamilton, by which he enriched his corrupt sattelites, and hoped to render the States subservient to, and dependent upon the Federal power.

This mode of getting rid of the State Debts, was broached by order of Daniel Webster, soon after his return from Engtand. The Commercial Advertiser of New York, and the American of that city came out in its favor and put forth feelers to ascertain whether public opinion was prepared for so broad a stride towards a revival of the permicious practices of old federalism. Mr. Webster himself, soon after the opening of the session of '38-'39, made some demonstrations of an intention to bring the subject before the Senate. Undor the belief that he would do so, a committee was appointed to consider and report upon it. They did make a report. adverse to the principle, and several Democratic Senators made able speeches against it. A vote was taken upon it, and the report was adopted almost unanimously; Mr. Webster, if we remember aright, dodged on the occasion. To Mr. Wm. Cost Johnson belongs the doubtful honor of bringing up this condemned proposition a second time. He laid it before the House, and upon taking a vote, but four persons were found with hardihood enough to vote for it.

But federalism does not give over its purposes so tamely.-In the absence of all other good qualities it has no lack of perseverance. Petitions in favor of Cost Johnson's plan are silently circulating every where; the origin and nature of the scheme, and the fact that it is a twice rejected measure of the whig party, is carefully kept out of view, and people are only told that it is an excellent way to "get rid" of State Taxes and State Debts. We have no fear that the odious and unjust proposition can ever be adopted, but we deem it a duty to warn our friends against this insidious and specious attempt to saddle the general Government with a National Debt. There has been no wider point of difference between the great parties of this country, than this of incurring large indebtedness by the general government. It has been the pride and beast of our party that under Gen. Jackson's administration, the debt of the United States was all paid off, while it has always been a cardinal opinion of the federalists that a inational debt is a national blessing." The scheme of Assumption adopted at the instance of Gen. Hamilton, was strenously opposed by the early democrats, and yet there was far more apology for that measure, than can be offered for the one now on the tapis. The debts then assumed, were alleged to have been incurred for the desence of their common country, by the several states. For the debts now due by the states, no such plea can be set ur! The money was expended by the dwn benefit, and there is no shadow of the sum of $37,249.
