See First Page. Protestant Association.

We will publish on Monday, as a matter of public information, the constitution adopted by this recently organized association. As ours is a political journal, not pledged to the dissemination of any exclusive religious opinions, the request of the association for all "protestant" papers to insert their proceedings, does not apply to our paper. But as the extraordinary, and as it is regarded by a large portion of the community, illiberal object of the society, has created much curiosity, we think our KINS, of Allegheny, readers of all denominations, desire to get some information of its proceedings.

We have been requested by some members of the Church whose doctrines are to be assailed by this combination, to permit them, if necessary, to reply to the charges that may be made against them and to explain such doctrines of their Church as may be misrepresented. As public jours nalists, willing to do equal justice to all. we will cheerfully comply with their request, if their articles are kept within a proper length for the columns of our paper.

The restriction the state to the Democrats, and the confidence created by the return of faithful public servants are the main causes for this improvement in the credit of the State.
