I had often heard Mr. Jamison before, and always with pleasure; but, on the present occasion, his performance greatly exceeded my expectations The audience, owing to the evening being wet and disagreeable, was not so large as, had the weather been favorable, it ondoubtedly would have been. Mr. Jimison is deservedly a favor te with our citizens, and the manner in which he acqui = ted himself this evening is well calculated to make him more so. His readings were easy, natural chaste; his recitations were, as the occasion required, animated, vehement, in passioned or calm, dignified and delivery, Mr. Jamison becomes, for the time, what he should be voice, and a distinct and well measured delivery. Mr. Jamison becomes, for the time, what he should be, a faithful delinement of the scenes, and the feeling, which his author intended to be portraved. His fidelity in this respect, so suddenly transfers your attention from the speaker to the fers your attention from the speaker to the subject, that it requires time and reflect that the pleasure wished the reflect that the pleasure wished to make the throughout the subject, should, it justice, be attributed to the vivides with which it was presented by the Speaker.

I was pleased with his matter and manner, and deductive, and who were fortunate enough to hear him, were equally well pleasure.
