

Resol Allah! What do you? All the while the smoke curled up faster and faster. Presently he said, "Bismillah! I see a horse—a horseman—I see two horsemen—I see three—I see four—I see five—I see seven horsemen, and the seventh is a Sultan." "Has he a flag?" cried the Magician. "He has three," answered the boy. "What are they?" says the other, "now, what he laid his eyes across the fire, and standing up addressed the travelers in these words:—"Name your name—be it that of those that are upon the earth, or those that are beneath it; be it Frank, Moor, Turk, or Indian, prince or beggar, living or breathing, or resolved into the dust of Adam, 3000 years ago—speak, and this boy shall behold and describe."

The first name was William Shakespeare. The Magician made three reverences towards the window, waved his hand nine times, sang out something beyond their interpretation, and at length called out, "Boy, what do you behold?" "The Sultan alone remains," said the child—"and besides him I see a pale-faced Frank—but not dressed like these Franks—with large eyes, a pointed beard, a tall hat, roses on his shoes, and a short mantle!" The other asked for Francis Arnot de Voltaire, and the boy immediately described a lean, old, yellow-faced Frank, with a huge brown wig, a nutmeg-grater profile, spindly-shanks, buckled shoes, and a gold snuff-box! Lord Prudhoe now named Archibald Wrengham, and the Arab boy made answer, and said, "I perceive a tall, grey-haired Frank, with a little black silk petticoat, walking in a garden with a little book in his hand. He is reading on the book—his eyes are bright and gleaming—his teeth are white—he is the happy-looking Frank I ever behold!" Major Felix now named a brother of his, who is in the cavalry of the East India Company, in the presidency of Madras. The magician signed, and the boy again answered: "I see a red-haired Frank, with a short red jacket and white trousers. He is standing by the sea shore and behind him there is a black man in a turban, holding a beautiful horse richly caparisoned." "God in heaven!" cried Felix. "Nay," the boy replied, "this is an old Frank—he has turned round while you are speaking, and by Allah he has but one arm!" Upon this the Major avoiced away. His brother lost his left arm in the campaign of Aoi!

From the National Intelligencer, Martine Fete. The wardroom officers of the steam-ship Misouri, now lying at the navy yard, gave, on Wednesday night last, one of the most brilliant and interesting balls that have ever been given in Washington. The day was lowering, and no rainbow of hope gave the promise of a pleasant evening; but the attraction was too great to be resisted by the majority of those invited—and happy were those who yielded to their inclination. The copy of the presented on a near approach the vessel was strikingly beautiful; and, once treading the deck you were in Fairy-land. It was the romance of a war-ship from which we could wish never to be awakened to the dangers which may subsequently peril the lives of our gallant crews, whose polite attentions have created in their interest in the which will follow it and them wherever they go.

The masts and shrouds of the frigate were studded with lamps, which, in the surrounding darkness, entirely obscured the but looking like the stars of a constellation rather nearer to the earth than is their wont. The ladies' dressing room below at once stamped the character of the entertainment to be anticipated above. Flowers and coveignets in profusion decorated the room, and every accent of comfort which elegant houses on land could offer was there. On ascending the deck you were for a few moments bewildered, and knew not where to fix admiring attention—whether on the canopy or on the temporary ceiling above, composed of the flags of all nations beautifully blending in union over your head; the tasteful transparencies, ingeniously filling the port-holes around; or the colored lamps of every hue, diffusing a mellowed light through the whole. Some of the dread weapons of war were metamorphosed into candlesticks, and several boy chandeliers occupied the ceiling of the ballroom. The officers of the army and navy were mostly in rich uniforms, which, mingling with the gay colors of their youthful partners, and harmonizing with the brilliant fanciful adornments of the frigate, presented a varied pattern of unparalleled beauty. The inspiring music from two excellent bands gave signal for the union of merry hearts and hands in the quadrille, in alternation with the melodious Strauss waltzes. The forward part of the deck on either side was occupied by a recluse supper, in which liberality to profusion was displayed; while the apartments below were furnished with an additional excellent supper for the gentlemen guests.—Nothing that could tempt the palate or gratify the eye was deficient, and the flavor and fragrance of all were enhanced by the hospitable and amiable attentions of the accomplished commander, (Captain Newton), and the youthful entertainers, whose home is on the mountain wave and in the hearts of thousands, many of whom will write their future course through life with the exciting pleasures of this unique party, exemplifying at once the delights of ship and shore.

NEW ORLEANS, April 10. Military on board the Texian Schooner of War San Antonio.—Yesterday, a Court Martial was convened on board the Texian sloop of war Austin, for the trial of Frederick Shepherd, and eight others, on a charge of mutiny on board the Texian schooner of war San Antonio, on the 11th of February, 1842, whilst lying in the Mississippi river, opposite this city. In the mutiny, Lieut. C. F. Fuller was killed, and two midshipmen were wounded—two particulars of which were published at the time. Most of the mutineers have been in the city prisons from that period until some time last week, when they were delivered to the Texian Commodore, upon a requisition of President Houston. After the examination of several witnesses, J. D. Shepherd, one of the mutineers, was called, who turned States evidence, upon a grant of free pardon from the President. But for this and similar testimony, the prosecution might have failed, as the principal witnesses have perished upon the ill-fated San Antonio, which was lost in Gulf, on the 5th of September. The testimony having closed, the Court adjourned to this morning.

Bishop Hughes and Fourierism. From a lecture recently delivered by this distinguished divine, we find that he assumes the same ground in relation to the social equality of man as the advocates of Industrial Association. His lecture has been extensively circulated and admired for its depth of reasoning, the justness of the views of the lecturer has taken of the social world. The following is a brief abstract from a N. Y. paper: He commenced his lecture by a reference to the three great divisions of society—the wealthy, who can command the labor of others without having either to obey or labor themselves—the large classes, who, although obliged to labor for subsistence, can yet regulate at their own pleasure the hours of toil and of rest—and those who are altogether dependent on labor, and that according as it may be required by the interest or caprice of others. After a hasty sketch of the depressed and suffering condition at the present day, of those who are doomed to the lowest grade of social servitude, the lecturer proceeded to take an historical survey of the state and condition of the Greek and Roman slaves, and the state of the middle ages. He drew a startling picture of their sufferings and degradation, and then pointed out with much eloquence how the growing progress of Christianity had emancipated these enslaved masses, and described the manner in which the Church of Rome had aided in this great work of redemption and amelioration. He dwelt at some length on the state of the world on the eve of the Reformation, and represented it as presenting every prospect of the advancing and magnificent progress and happiness of the human race. But that event had occurred, had witnessed a woful obstacle to the advancing tide of social improvement, and was the main cause of the present evils which afflict the Empire of a world-wide extent. The Ruling Passion.—A famous usurer of Paris, when on his death bed, his confessor presented a silver crucifix to him, with a view to awaken him to a sense of his situation. The dying miser, after examining the cross with the most minute attention, suddenly exclaimed—"Sir, I can lend you but a very small sum on such a pledge."

Quite common.—The practice of cow-hiding editors. Little men of the quill have to suffer most unconsciously whenever they have soul enough to say something disagreeable to some pompous blackguard; but we do not observe that their papers lose any of their independence by the operation.

The amount of specie received in New Orleans within the last six months, may be set down in round numbers at nine millions of dollars.

A Wonderful Phenomenon.—The citizens of Mobile were thrown into a state of great consternation, a short time ago, from the appearance in the western horizon, of something about the size of a man's fist. From the time it was first discovered until its final disappearance behind a cloud, was the space of three quarters of an hour. It was apparently thirty degrees above the horizon. Persons who saw it, were divided in the opinion as to what it was.—Some defined it to be the butt end of the comet; some the "Lagayra Light," and others something else. It turned out to be a kite with a light tied to its tail.

Absence of mind.—A Millerite was lately lecturing in Ohio on the necessity of immediate preparation for the final account, and with much feeling and eloquence, proclaimed that it was the last day, that another would never dawn upon us—suddenly concluded by informing the audience, that they were then dismissed, and that he would address them again, at the same place the next evening.

Theatrical.—Mr. and Mrs. Broughman have commenced an engagement at the Chatham Theatre, New York. Hackett is also quite successful at the Park. Forrest will appear at the Tremont, in a short time.

The New Orleans Picayune of the 11th inst. states that a few days previous, a disturbance arose among some Indians and white men, at a village between Hedropolis and Markville, in the course of which five arms were used. The result was that three of the Indians were killed.

Henson's Flying Machine.—The N. Y. Sun contains an entry representing the Flying Machine invented by Henson, about to be tested in England. It has created great excitement in that country; and a bill has been introduced into Parliament to charter a company to put it in practical operation.

A Pledge.—Mr. Clay in a recent speech delivered at Lexington, made the following declaration, which will do credit to his integrity, and the avowed portion of his friends. Here it is:—"Mr. Clay went on further to say, that, in his opinion, if a Whig President should be elected, it would be his imperative duty to do ample justice, in the administration of the public patronage, to the great Whig party of the country."

Makes People Small.—The general use of ardent spirits in any country or district reduces the average height of the inhabitants. In the department of Finisterre, [Britannia] alcohol drinks are much used. The stature of the inhabitants are gradually growing shorter. The measurement of persons liable to military service showed a falling off of one inch on an average in 20 years. At this rate if temperance does not plant its standard in that neighborhood, the inhabitants in course of time will be reduced to five feet six inches. In 120 years it will be but five feet. In a thousand years from that date [time continuing, as Miller says] their size will be reduced to ten inches perpendicular; and then, we guess they will begin to feel insignificant.—There is no doubt that the use of rum makes people little. In London, they give little poodle dogs gin sling to stunt their growth, and it is probable that the diminutive size of the two-legged, mustached, poules on Chesnut street is caused by indulgence in a similar kind of drink. Will some adept in natural history investigate this subject?—Phil. Mercury.

A Noble Trait in the Character of the Spaniard is thus warmly eulogized by Borrow in his "Bible in Spain":—"To the honor of Spain be it spoken, it is one of the few countries in Europe where poverty is never insulted nor looked upon with contempt. Even at an inn, the poor man is never spurned from the door, and if not harbored, is at least dismissed with fair words, and consigned to the mercies of God and his mother. This is as it should be. I laugh at the bigotry and prejudice of Spain; I abhor the cruelty and ferocity which have cast a stain of eternal infamy on her history, but I will say for the Spaniards, that, in their social intercourse, no people in the world exhibit a juster feeling of what is due to the dignity of human nature, or better understand the behavior which it behoves a man to adopt towards his fellow being.

Editorial Amusements.—The editor of the Washington Globe, in reply to the course of sumptuous living and extravagance made upon him by Mr. Hill, says he tears his flowers with his own hand, makes his own butter, raises his own chickens, turkeys and pigs, and nearly all the vegetables that are found at his table; in a word, he is a farmer and gardener, as well as an editor. Supremely selfish must be the man who would deprive another of the enjoyment of such luxuries as he can produce by his own toil, and that, too, during the hours which nature requires for relaxation from his accustomed employment.

The Illinois river is now open to the head of navigation, and a good stage of water for boats of the class that usually run in that trade.

The Times Down the River.—The Cincinnati Gazette boasts of the great number of steamboats building in that city and of the otherwise improved state of business.—THE CHRONICLE SAYS:

THE CATTLE BUSINESS.—A leading butcher informed us this morning that only 40 head of cattle had been brought to this market during the past week and for them three dollars per cow had been readily paid. The cattle were only ordinary, and this price is a large advance on the prices paid in the fall.

At this price, in the present state of the market, we should think it profitable for farmers to bring their cattle to this city. The prices are as good as the eastern markets will pay for driving. Nearly all the cattle killed in this city come from Kentucky, for which a very large sum of money is paid.

We have often thought that some of the farmers of the Miami country could make a good business of raising cattle of good breeds for this city. The Kentucky good breeds are higher priced than any lands in Ohio, the best evidence that the business is a good one.

Sargent's Magazine.—This Magazine bids fair to be one of the most profitable monthlies published in this country. It has received the first four numbers, and have been most gratified by a hasty glance over their contents. The embellishments are of the first order and are more numerous than those of any of its cotemporaries.

Oregon Convention.—Is this ever abandoned? We heard yesterday that a call was contemplated for a Convention of Columbus, of such persons as felt interested in the settlement of this question, too. We see nothing in this Statesman to that effect.

The people of Iowa are moving west. At several points, companies are forming, and at Burlington a regular organization has been effected, and all necessary regulations made for the movement of the emigrants and mode of proceeding.

A committee, appointed at a meeting in this latter place, reported that $50,000 equip each emigrant, exclusive of a horse that no blacks should accompany them, that one Capt. and one Lieutenant would be the proper officers; that each man should deposit $20 for company fees, and that as soon as fifty good men were registered, they would march.
