These are nutritive principles; they do not assist in making the flesh of animals; and when animals are fed on these alone, they die But animals poss seas a certain degree of heat, and their todies have generally a temperature above that of the atmosphere-about 100 degrees of Fahrenheit's thermometer. Whence, then, comes this heat? From the burning of the sugar, starch, gum, &c. The air very gas that is produced by the burning of wood or charcoal in a fire. Charcoal is carbon, and animals take in daily a large quantity of carbon in their food. It is the burning or combustion of this substance in the body that produces animal heat. In hot countries, animals, on this account take less carbon. The food of the East Indian contains only about 12 per cent. of carbon; while that of the Green per cent. The depraved state of the Greenlander, who drinks train-oil, and eats tallow candles by the dozen, might be pitied or wondered at; but it is necessary to his healthy existence. Another reason for ana imals requiring carbonaceous food in cold climates, is, that the air is more condensed. and the same measure contained a greater quantity of oxygen; that gas being the agent which, by uniting with the carbon and forming carbonic acid. gave out the heat. Strong exercise also demands a large supply of carbonaceous food, an account of the Twould be well for the traveling community to hear oxygen taken in during the hard breathing thus produced. This is illustrated in an experiment made by Lord Ducie at Whitfield One hundred sheep were placed in a shed, and are 20 lbs. of Swedes each, per day; another hundred were placed in open air, and ate 25 lbs. of Swedes per day; yet, at the end of a certain period, the sheep which were protected, although they had a fifth less food, weighed 3 ibs, a head more than the unprotected sheep. The reason of this is obvious: the exposed sheep had their cars bonaceous food consumed in keeping up their animal heat. Warmth is thus reen to be an equivalent for food. This is also illustrated by the fact, that two hives of bees do not consume so much honey when together as when separate, on account of the warmth being greater; and they have less occasion for consuming the honey, which is their fuel. Cattle, for the same reason, thrive much better when kept warm than when exposed to the cold. The cause of animals getting fat is, that they take in more carbonaceous food than they require for producing animal heat; the consequence s, that it is deposited in the cellular tissue, in the form of fat. Fat is an unnatural production, and its accumulation, is not necessary for securing the health of the body. When stored up, however, it will serve the body for keeping up its animal heat, and by this means its life, till it is all consumed. An instance is related of a fat pig having been kept without food for 160 days, having been kept alive by its own fat. Another element necessary to be taken into consideration in the fattening of animals, is motion or exercise. Every action of the body-nay, every thought of the mind-is attended with chemical change, a portion of the deposited tissues ere thus being constantly consumed. It is on this account that when animals are fattened, they are kept quiet and still.
