trates, have hitherto done little else than give a passive adhesion to the cause, but now the government have roused them into fierce opposition, and a mark of disgrace will be put upon any man who dares hereafter to accept the office of magistrate under the shameful and humiliating conditions prescribed by the Peel Ministry. There is in this proceeding, as well as in the intemperate threats and windy bragga. docio of Peel and Wellington, a fatality and blindness that seems providential; it bears a marked and most exciting resemblance to the headleng and imperious pol icy that preceded the divorce between the American colonies and the British crown, and like that, if persisted in, will result in a further dismemberment of that corrupt and crumbling empire. Not all the elocated and wisdom of O'Connell, nor all the influence of that matchless effort of political sagacity—the Loyal Association of Dublin, could have bequeathed to this cause the enthusiasm, unanimity and potenttalenergy which two false and haughty steps of the English Ministry has effected. It is to us, then clear, that two causes
