THE TRADE OF THE ATLANTIC CITIES .- The trade of the Atlantic cities-New York, Boston, Philadelphia and Baltimore-shows evident signs of an improvement, and of the setting in of an early fall trade. The number of strangers in each city is large, and sales appear to be improving. The demand for imported goods on which the new tariff was imposed is improving; molasses and other West India goods, and also English manufactures. Prices are recovering in some degree the depression they underwent in the genof goods, and the little advance which has taken place in agricultural products, has afforded some means of purchasing; consequently stocks are moving off, and the weight of the tariff is beginning to be felt.
