Important to Owners of Saw Mills.
SNYDER'S unrivalled Self Setters, for saw mills, which have been so fully tested in different parts of the United States, as well as in the cities of Pittsburgh and Allegheny, can be seen in operation at a number of mills in this neighborhood, viz: at Mr. Wickersham's mills, on Penn street; at Bowman & Chambers's mills, near the upper Allegheny bridge, and at Morrison's mills, on Bare's Island, and others.—The above named machine can be obtained at W. Wallace's shop, on Liberty street, near Smithfield, where it is fitting up, and where the machine will be kept constantly on hand. Apply to B. F. Snyder, or W. W. Wallace. may 5

Evans' Chamomile Pills.
ABRAHAM J. CLEMER, residing at 66, Mott street, New York, was afflicted with Dyspepsia in its most aggravated form. The symptoms were violent headache, great debility, fever, costiveness, cough, heartburn, pain in the chest and stomach always after eating, impaired appetite, sensation of sinking at the stomach, furred tongue, nausea, with frequent vomitings, dizziness towards night and restlessness. These had continued upwards of a twelvemonth, when, on consulting Dr. Wm. Evans, 100 Chatham street, and submitting to his ever successful and agreeable mode of treatment, the patient was completely restored to health in the short space of one month, and grateful for the incalculable benefit derived, gladly came forward and volunteered the above statement. Better Bargains than ever, at the Three Big Doors.
THE subscriber would respectfully inform his customers and the public generally, that notwithstanding the unprecedented sales at the Three Big Doors, during the present season; he has still on hand the largest and most varied assortment of elegant CLOTHING that can be bought west of the mountains.—The public may rest assured that all articles offered at his store are manufactured from FRESH GOODS, purchased in the Eastern markets this spring and made into garments by Pittsburgh workmen.

In consequence of the multiplication of slop shops in our city, filled with pawn brokers clothes and the musty, cast off garments of former seasons, from the eastern cities, the public should be cautious to ascertain the character of the establishments in which they are invited to purchase, before they part with their money. The articles offered at several of the concerns in this city, are the mere offals of New York and Philadelphia slop shops, and sent out here to be palmed off on the Pittsburgh public. Purchasers should be on their guard against these impositions, and they may rely on the fact that no establishment that advertises eastern made Clothing, can give as good an article or as advantageous bargains as can be had at the "Three Big Doors."

The public will please remember that all the subscriber's garments are made in this city, by competent workmen, and not gathered up like the goods now offered by the "birds of passage" from the shreds and patches of eastern slop shops. It will always be his endeavor to maintain the reputation that the "Three Big Doors" have obtained for furnishing a superior style of CLOTHING in every respect, and at prices below those of any other establishment.

He would again return his thanks to his friends and the public for the unprecedented patronage bestowed upon his establishment, and believing that they have found it to their advantage to deal with him, he would repeat his invitation to all those who wish to purchase Clothing of every description at the lowest price, to call at No. 151, LIBERTY ST. JOHN M'CLOSKEY.

Look at This.
THE attention of those who have been somewhat sceptical in reference to the numerous certificates published in favor of Dr. Swayne's Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry, on account of the persons being unknown in this Section of the State, is respectfully directed to the following certificate, the writer of which has been a citizen of this borough for several years, and is known as a gentleman of integrity and responsibility.

To the Agent, Mr. J. KIRBY.

I have used Dr. Swayne's Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry for a Cough, with which I have been severely afflicted for about four months, and I have no hesitation in saying that it is the most effective medicine that I have been able to procure. It composes all uneasiness, and agrees well with my diet,—and maintains a regular and good appetite. I can sincerely recommend it to all others similarly afflicted. J. MISNICK, Borough of Chambersburgh.

FOR SAFETY,
Travellers should select Boats provided with Evan's Safety Guards for preventing Explosion of Steam Boilers
IT would be well for the traveling community to bear in mind that their security depends entirely upon their own encouragement of boats that have or may be at the expense of procuring the above apparatus. And that every individual making such selections is contributing towards a general introduction of an invention admitted by all men who understand the principles of the Steam Engine, to be a sure preventative against those dreadful disasters. You have certainly, in the hundreds of explosions that have already taken place, their almost daily occurrence, and the thousands of lives that have already been lost, a sufficient warning, and inducement to make inquiry for a Safety guard Boat, and in every case to give it the preference. They have went to an additional expense that your lives may be secure. Ought you not therefore to meet them with a corresponding degree of liberality, and by your preference show that you appreciate their laudable endeavors to stop this awful sacrifice of human life. They do not charge more than other boats; their accommodations in other respects are equal, and in many cases superior; and as there is one leaving Pittsburgh every day, why will you run any risk, when it is so completely in your own power to avoid those disasters.
All boats marked thus [*] in the List of Arrivals and Departures, in another part of this paper, are supplied with the Safety Guard.

OLIVER CROMWELL.

The London Sun, in rebuking the ungenerous spirit exhibited by the British functionaries in excluding Olive Cromwell from amongst the "sculptured representatives of the sovereigns of England, which are to adorn the new Houses of Parliament," thus eloquently sketches the character of that great man.

We have already given publicity to the announcement that, "no place is left for Oliver Cromwell amongst the sculptured representatives of the sovereigns of England, which are to adorn the new Houses of Parliament." Such, we presume, is the determination to which the committee have come, to whom the supervision of all proposed internal decorations and adornments for the most magnificent structure which has been raised in this country since the building of St. Paul's Cathedral, is confided. The authority, however, of a dozen printed parliamentary papers will scarcely convince us that the committee can have, designedly, so "committed" themselves! Such an omission would be a scandal upon the gratitude and liberality of this age—a libel on the veracity and import of all the traditions and written history of the first half of the last two hundred years. It would involve, if practically acted upon, a slavish and preposterous loss age to the mere name of loyalty. It would proclaim to posterity the disgraceful fact, that so overawed were the people of England, in the 19th century, by the prestige which attends—not the right exercise of kingly power, but—the wearing of a royal crown, that they thus signally repudiated their own obligations, and those of their ancestors, to the man who, uncrowned himself, advanced this nation in the 17th century to the foremost rank among the nations of the world, and taught the Crowns of other European nations to recognise and to revere the paramount authority of his simple Protectorate.

We know, by fatal experience, what enormous absurdities "Committees of Taste" (as they are modestly termed in the parlance of that Parliament which really nominates them) invariably commit. From former associations connected with similar bodies, and their patronage of Mr. Wyatt's card screen Gothic, and Sir John Soane's Venitian Greek, and other men's equally non descript caprices, evidenced in the late House of Lords' cloister and facade, the painted chamber, the "restored" Courts of Law in Palace-yard, &c.,—it was not without apprehension that we observed the name of Sir Robert Peel attached to the list of that committee upon whose rack, and at whose pleasure, the invention of Mr. Barry himself, and the design of sculptors and painters employed on the same magnificent work, are liable to be distorted, thumb-screwed, distended, or contracted at any time. But our skepticism as to the Premier's taste or judgement in the arts, although equal to our skepticism as to the result of his foreign, or the resources of his domestic policy, extends hardly so far as to question the soundness of his general judgment and strong good sense in matters involving no immediate objects of party or political interest, or official administration.

We cannot imagine that a minister, who is always forward to boast that he came into public life from the ranks of the people, would be cowingly koquizant of so profound an insult to the memory of him whom we must emphatically distinguish in our historic annals as THE man of the people. For Oliver Cromwell was the impersonation of almost all the best, and undoubtedly of some (though but a few) of the worst qualities, moral and physical, of Englishmen. In his single individuality were concentrated the self-examining, self-confiding, strong-willed but cool-headed,—impetuous yet dispassionate, resolute but calculating, daring though provident, iron-hearted, iron-nerved, iron-headed English commoner, half saint, half hypocrite, at once a preacher and a soldier, an excited enthusiast and a profound politician; a "soldier of Christ," as he called himself, and of the Parliament, as he approved himself; a marvellous but unconscious instrument in the hands of Providence for working out the destinies of a marvellous time. He was, in short, what the circumstances of that time made all who figured in the more important scenes then transacted in his own country, the creature of external impulses, whether of good or of evil. But his was the glory of so controlling by the mastery of his own genius, and the force and discipline of his reason, his own actions, and the actions of others under the same influence, as to bend them to the consolidation indeed of his own superiority, but still more anxiously to the permanent establishment of the wealth, the power, and the welfare of his country.

Let it be granted that with the rapid evolution of events—stormy, tragical, and appalling as they were—which immediately preceded and followed the execution of Charles I, the better qualities of Cromwell underwent that deterioration which almost invariably affects those of other men subjected to similar influences. His first spirited exertions in vindication of his country's liberty against the intolerable encroachments of the Throne, degenerated into rebellion, were then sullied by the guilt of regicide, and determined in the unconstitutional assumption of despotic power over the people and the Parliament who had raised him, it may be said, after the manner of the old Romans—on their shields, and proclaimed him "dictator." Let it be granted that the lawless violences and plunder which he directed, or abetted, or sanctioned, against the personal rights and the property of the royalists, the Parliament itself, and the political confederates in the towns and cities, were as incompatible with his solemnly professed regard for popular liberty, as his gross buffoonery and private conversation compromised his still more sacred pledges to the earnestness, sincerity, and zeal of his religious convictions. But, after all, we must make large allowances for the confused notions of moral right and wrong, of social obligation, political allegiance, civil responsibility, and religious duty, which had been generated in men's minds by the wild, various, and vision-like excitement of that strange period. King James the First had bequeathed to his successor an inheritance of external peace. But the furious elements of civil commotion were in intense action beneath the surface of this specious patrimony. The long suppressed principles of antagonistic strife for existence and power between the high-flying pretensions of the Crown, and the stubborn purpose of the people to retrieve, extend, and guaranty their ancient liberties, burst out into that fierce convulsion which presently destroyed the monarch and the sovereign. In the slowly subsiding conflict of these principles, easily and often again awakened into destructive collision, Cromwell had to deal with a menancing condition of things, and with hostile opponents that were only grappled with by vigor almost beyond the law, and a consistency almost equally inaccessible to the suggestions of human pity and human weakness. Yet where, among successful leaders against the forces of ancient dynasties and opinions, thrones and monarchs, institutions and establishments, shall we find a parallel to Cromwell?—The King's death, be it remembered, was neither his exclusive act, nor could he, alone, have arrested a fate already determined on by those whose strength and will Cromwell could not yet pretend to oppose. If he gave way to the brutish intolerance of his Parliament in sanctioning the cruelties exercised against the madman Naylor and others, he is to be, to a great extent, excused by the puritanical bigotry of his time, and the concurring prejudices of the entire people. But neither his political vengeance nor his religious fanaticism indulged in those horrible excesses of bloodsh
