PITTSBURGH BOARD OF TRADE.
COMMITTEE FOR DECEMBER.
William Eichbaum—F. Lorenz—Robert Bell.

ETIQUETTE.—Our readers will no doubt peruse with attention the rules of politeness laid down by Count D'Orsay, which we publish on our outside.—By conforming to the principles there laid down, any one may establish for himself the character of being a "Finished gentleman from top to toe."

GEORGE R. RIDDLE, Esq. entered upon the duties of the Prothonotary's office, yesterday. His commission was read in the District Court, at 10 o'clock, and his predecessor surrendered the office into his hands. In taking leave of the late Prothonotary, Mr. SOTTON, Judge GRIER took occasion to compliment him as an excellent officer, who had promptly and faithfully performed the duties which had devolved upon him. This is no small praise, and would never have been given had it not been well deserved.

THE COTTON CULTURE, &c.

A correspondent of the National Intelligencer, in the course of an able article, gives the following as a memorandum obtained from the private papers of our venerable Consul at Liverpool, the late Mr. James Maury. In it the imports there of American cotton are stated at

5	bales in	3 vessels for	1785
6	"	3 "	1786
103	"	5 "	1787
262	"	6 "	1788

He adds:—"Whereas, during only one week in the month of March, 1843, there arrived in that port not less than 177,515 bales, brought from the U. States by such a fleet of ships as had never before been seen to enter that harbor. This immense yield was produced by the South; but it was not a tithe of the last crop grown there. The entire crop of 1842 did not fall far short of two and a half millions of bales, being 2,380,000. This, at the moderate estimate of six cents the pound, or twenty-four dollars the bale, gives fifty-seven millions, or more than one-third the entire floating capital of the country in this one item alone."

The same writer, in another part of his paper, says: —"When the first handful of American cotton arrived in England, half a century ago, could it have entered into the mind of Adam Smith, or of the most gifted seer that has ever indulged his fancy in visions of political economy, to conceive that the fleecy cargo which was then seen coming over the sea, was destined to spread itself in a little while, like Ahab's cloud, over the realms of commerce, and to make the broad ocean white with ships and with trade? So requisite and indispensable has this article now become in our domestic economy, that we of the present day cannot well conceive wherewith man was comfortably clothed before he used cotton as raiment. To others, but not to us, belongs the task of interpreting and expounding those laws of trade by which its future increase is to be regulated, and the ultimate bounds set to its uses. But as for the resources of this cotton region, and its capacities of supply, there appears to us to be no limits, which fancy, in its widest range may reach. If we take a bale as the average yield of an acre of ground, the statistics of the last census show that the whole quantity of land planted down and cultivated in cotton, throughout all the southern and western states, would not, if brought near and thrown altogether into one broad plantation, equal the tenth part of the State of Mississippi alone."

THE QUEEN AND THE MAYOR—AMUSING INCIDENT.

Victoria's recent visit to Cambridge, and the incidents of the "Royal Progress," were duly noted by the London Journalists.

Towards the afternoon the weather became propitious, and the royal carriage—a close traveling chariot—was seen to approach at a rapid rate, when the Mayor, who had previously caused the mace to be relacquered, rushed it in his hand and poked it in the carriage window. Her Majesty, not knowing what to do with it gently pushed it back again. Prince Albert ordered the postilions to stop; and it having been explained to him the incident of the mace was intended as a mark of respect, the Mayor having received a hint to that effect as all further manœuvring with the formidable weapon was allowed to walk by the side of the royal vehicle. The Queen spoke to him very "graciously," asking him why he did not present the keys of the city, when her Majesty was informed that Cambridge had no gate, or if it ever had one the keys had been long ago lost. "But," said the facetious functionary, "every arch has a key, and I might have presented your Majesty with the key of the triumphal arch if I had thought of it."

The Queen was observed to repeat the mayoral pleasantry to Prince Albert; and the royal couple were much amused by the Mayor's efforts to keep up with the royal carriage. Occasionally he succeeded by merely taking long strides, at other times he found it necessary to assume a sort of a hopping movement, but he gallantly went through the gutters without any regard to his chaussure; and, though what is commonly termed "winded," he contrived to keep up a quick succession of replies to the royal questionings. The following is a specimen:—

The Queen.—The town seems a very fine one?

The Mayor.—Yes, your (hop) Majesty. It has always (skip) been so considered (jump.) But if Cambridge (splash) into the puddle) was thought much of (stride) before, what will it be (trip over a stone) now that your Majesty (a regular leap to keep up) has condescended (a terrific gasp) to visit us?

The Queen on arriving at Trinity College, politely thanked him at the gate, and expressed her fear that the scamper had wearied him, upon which the Mayor contrived to get out in one breath, that "He could never be weary in the presence of her Majesty." The royal carriages having passed in, the Mayor was alternately cheered and laughed at by the bystanders.

LAST CHANCE.—The giant Girl will positively leave on Sunday morning; those who wish to visit her will remember that Saturday will be her last day in Pittsburgh. Hundreds visit her daily; ladies had better call in the afternoon's, as the room is very much crowded in the evening's.

A PROTRACTED MEETING

Is now in progress in the English Lutheran Church, Seventh street. The Pastor will be assisted by Rev. Mr. LEHMANOWSKY, and several other ministerial brethren. Preaching every evening at 6½ o'clock: meetings for inquiry every afternoon at 3 o'clock.

FOR SAFETY,

Travellers should select Boats provided with Evan's Safety Guards for preventing Explosion of Steam Boilers

IT would be well for the traveling community to bear in mind that their security depends entirely upon their own encouragement of boats that have or may be at the expense of procuring the above apparatus. And that every individual making such selections is contributing towards a general introduction of an invention admitted by all men who understand the principles of the Steam Engine, to be a sure preventative against those dreadful disasters. You have certainly, in the hundreds of explosions that have already taken place, their almost daily occurrence, and the thousands of lives that have already been lost, a sufficient warning, and inducement to make inquiry for a Safety guard Boat, and in every case to give it the preference. They have went to an additional expense that your lives may be secure. Ought you not therefore to meet them with a corresponding degree of liberality, and by your preference show that you appreciate their laudable endeavors to stop this awful sacrifice of human life. They do not charge more than other boats; their accommodations in other respects are equal, and in many cases superior; and as there is one leaving Pittsburgh every day, why will you run any risk, when it is so completely in your own power to avoid these disasters.

All boats marked thus [*] in the List of Arrivals and Departures, in another part of this paper, are supplied with the Safety Guard.
