Important to Owners of Saw Mills.

SNYDER'S unrivalled Self Setters, for saw mills, which have been so fully tested in different parts of the United States, as well as in the cities of Pittsburgh and Allegheny, can be seen in operation at a number of mills in this neighborhood, viz: at Mr. Wickersham's mills, on Penn street; at Bowman & Chamberlain's mills, near the upper Allegheny bridge, and at Morrison's mills, on Hare's Island, and others.—The above named machine can be obtained at W. W. Wallace's shop, on Liberty street, near Smithfield, where it is fitting up, and where the machine will be kept constantly on hands. Apply to B. F. Snyder, or W. W. Wallace. may 5

Evans' Chamomile Pills.

ABRAHAM J. CLEMER, residing at 66, Mott street, New York, was afflicted with Dyspepsia in its most aggravated form. The symptoms were violent head ache, great debility, fever, costiveness, cough, heartburn, pain in the chest and stomach always after eating, impaired appetite, sensation of sinking at the stomach, furred tongue, nausea, with frequent vomitings, dizziness towards night and restlessness. These had continued upwards of a twelvemonth, when, on consulting Dr. Wm. Evans, 100 Chatham street, and submitting to his ever successful and agreeable mode of treatment, the patient was completely restored to health in the short space of one month, and grateful for the incalculable benefit derived, gladly came forward and volunteered the above statement. Better Bargains than ever, at the Three Big Doors.

THE subscriber would respectfully inform his customers and the public generally, that notwithstanding the unprecedented sales at the Three Big Doors, during the present season he has still on hand the largest and most varied assortment of elegant CLOTHING that can be bought west of the mountains.—The public may rest assured that all articles offered at his store are manufactured from FRESH GOODS, purchased in the Eastern markets this spring and made into garments by Pittsburgh workmen.

In consequence of the multiplication of slop shops in our city, filled with pawn brokers clothes and the musty, cast off garments of former seasons, from the eastern cities, the public should be cautious to ascertain the character of the establishments in which they are invited to purchase, before they part with their money. The articles offered at several of the concerns in this city, are the mere offals of New York and Philadelphia slop shops, and sent out here to be palmed off on the Pittsburgh public. Purchasers should be on their guard against these impositions, and they may rely on the fact that no establishment that advertises eastern made Clothing, can give as good an article or as advantageous bargains as can be had at the "Three Big Doors."

The public will please remember that all the subscriber's garments are made in this city, by competent workmen, and not gathered up like the goods now offered by the "birds of passage" from the shreds and patches of eastern slop shops. It will always be his endeavor to maintain the reputation that the "Three Big Doors" have obtained for furnishing a superior style of CLOTHING in every respect, and at prices below those of any other establishment.

He would again return his thanks to his friends and the public for the unprecedented patronage bestowed upon his establishment, and believing that they have found it to their advantage to deal with him, he would repeat his invitation to all those who wish to purchase Clothing of every description at the lowest price, to call at No. 151, LIBERTY ST. JOHN M'CLOSKEY.

Look at This.

THE attention of those who have been somewhat sceptical in reference to the numerous certificates published in favor of Dr. Swayne's Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry, on account of the persons being unknown in this Section of the State, is respectfully directed to the following certificate, the writer of which has been a citizen of this borough for several years, and is known as a gentleman of integrity and responsibility.

To the Agent, Mr. J. KIRBY.

I have used Dr. Swayne's Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry for a Cough, with which I have been severely afflicted for about four months, and I have no hesitation in saying that it is the most effective medicine that I have been able to procure. It composes all uneasiness, and agrees well with my diet,—and maintains a regular and good appetite. I can sincerely recommend it to all others similarly afflicted. J. MINNICK, Borough of Chambersburgh.

AT THE THREE BIG DOORS,

No. 151, Liberty St., near the Jackson Foundry.

THE subscriber would respectfully inform his friends and the public, that his fall stock of Goods comprises a larger and more varied assortment than has ever been opened at any house in this city, and from the favorable terms at which his purchases were made, he is enabled to sell clothing cheaper than it can be had in any other establishment in this city. He would request the public to call and examine his splendid assortment of all the articles of dress, and from the excellence of the material, the style of workmanship and the very low price at which all his articles are sold, he feels confident that every one will find it to their advantage to purchase at the "Three Big Doors."

As none but the best cutters and workmen are employed, orders to make clothing will be attended to in a manner not surpassed by any other establishment in the city.

He would again return his thanks to his friends and the public for the unprecedented patronage bestowed upon his establishment, and believing that they have found it to their advantage to deal with him, he would repeat his invitation to all those who wish to purchase Clothing of every description at the lowest price, to call at No. 151, Liberty st. Iron Safes.

I RESPECTFULLY inform the public that I have and keep always on hand an assortment of Fire Proof Safes. The price, in consequence of the materials and labor being much lower, is reduced about thirty per cent. They are kept for sale at my shop, in Sixth street, above Smithfield, next to the church on the corner of 6th street—as also with Atwood, Jones & Co., and Dalzell & Fleming. In regard to the quality of my safes I leave those persons who have purchased and will purchase my safes to attest the utility of them. I desire no newspaper puff on my safes; justice and truth warrant me in informing the public that all my safes which have been in buildings burnt down for several years since I commenced have preserved all the papers, books, &c., which they contained. I have a card containing a number of certificates of the same, which are in circulation and in my hands and the agentes. JOHN DENNING.

N. B. A few pair of steel Springs for sale, made by Jones & Coleman, and will be sold low. Also, a screw press, with power to punch holes in half inch iron.

MANUFACTURED BY

CONSTABLE & BURKE,

Fifth Street, between Wood and Smithfield, Pittsburgh, Pa.

THE subscribers present their respects to their numerous friends for their former liberal patronage, and would take this method of assuring them and the public generally that all future favors will be duly appreciated. Their articles have been fully tested, of which sufficient testimony will be given to any inquirer.

The principles of their locks and safes are not surpassed in the Union.

The price also is considerably lessened, and will be found as low, if not below any other responsible house in the Union.

We would take this opportunity of thanking the various Editors of this city and elsewhere, who have spoken so highly of us and our safes.

The public are respectfully invited to examine our articles before purchasing elsewhere, feeling assured the superiority of our manufacture will be apparent to all candid spectators.

N. CONSTABLE & E. BURKE.

THE OLD MAN IN THE GRAVE YARD.

BY ROBERT MORRIS.

"There is no darkness like the cloud of mind,
On Grief's vain eye—the blindest of the blind!
Which may not—dare not see—but turns aside
To blackest shades—nor will endure a guide."
The Corsair.

There are dark hours in the history of every human being—periods of despondency and gloom, when life seems without a solitary ray of brightness, and all the future is shrouded in "mist and melancholy." At such times the spirit is depressed—the soul within is, "involved in shadows," and it is in vain that we turn and turn, and endeavor to avoid the ominous thoughts that crowd upon the brain. They force themselves upon us, and all our efforts to shake off the despair of the moment are idle and fruitless. Phantom shapes flit before the imagination—dismal forebodings crowd upon the mind—evil thoughts obtrude upon us, and for a time we feel miserable. The aspect of the external world sometimes produces this disposition, and thus we may infer that suicides are more common during periods of protracted storm, than in less dreary seasons. Who has not felt the cheering influence of a burst of sunshine—an angel glance, as it were, from the blue skies above us, like a ray of prosperity amid the darkness and despair of a long season of vicissitude? There are indeed few who are not influenced in tone of mind and feeling by long periods of gloomy and unpleasant weather, and the heavens shut out from the human vision, and no cheerful object to call our thoughts from the earthliness, the dreariness of the prospect.

Nay,—there are few who have not in journeying through life felt Reason tottering from her throne for a moment, and the Demons of Crime and Despair assume the mastery,—few who have not looked with shuddering soul into the shadowy future, and hesitated upon the brink of that most pitiable of all crimes, self-murder. This to some may seem a wild and improbable theory! But call up the past, gentle reader, and ask if among its "faded hours," no dark and dreadful record can be discovered?—no moment when life itself seemed a burthen and a curse, and the present worse than the mysterious future? If such record may be traced, down upon your knees and thank God that the bitter cup was permitted to pass by—that the demon did not master the better spirit within—that the faith and hope of the human soul were able to triumph over its sadness and despair. And if it may not—if you have been spared the "blackness and darkness" that I have attempted to describe—if the waters of life have not been embittered by gall and wormwood—if the coming hours have never seemed pregnant with shame and anguish, beyond the power of endurance, still down and return thanks to the Divine Source of all that is benificent, that you have been saved from such apprehended torment—such wretchedness of soul—such madness of despair. The curse of our first parents has thus far pressed upon you lightly. Be grateful, and invoke for the time to come the same exemption from the shadowy, the despairing, the insane, and the criminal. Who may tell what a day—what an hour may bring forth! Who point out the tree that may be riven by the next bolt from Heaven! Who the form that may be laid low by the next flash of lightning!

But to our story. It was a gloomy afternoon in the month of August, that restless, discontented, and unable to become interested in any volume at command, I sallied forth, scarcely knowing whither or with what object. I felt irritable and gloomy, and the more I exerted myself to shake off the evil spirit, the more did the sombre and the sad hover over and oppress me.

'It is the weather.' I said to myself; 'or perhaps I am not well—or perhaps some misfortune is at hand, and this 'casts its shadow before.'

And then a crowd of unhappy recollections passed before me, and discolored and distorted my diseased or darkened fancy. Thus I wandered on in my mood but one of contentment or joy, until I found myself in the immediate vicinity of a grave-yard. Scarcely conscious of my course, I slowly ascended the few stepsbefore the gateway, raised the latch, and was among the tombs. Thought seemed to assume a still more shadowy aspect, and as I moved slowly on, glancing upon one tombstone, and then upon another, and wondering within myself the history of the perishing bodies below, the vain world, with all its gaieties and follies—its temptations and its trials, passed before the eye of my mind. I stood with the mementos of the dead around me, and my thoughts wandered into the world of spirits. The ghosts of the departed flitted before me—the impalpable shapes of an eternal life—and thus at one moment I beheld the bright wings, and heard the glad voice of a seraph, and at another saw dark and flaming pinions, and heard shrieks of agony, groans of despair, and imprecations of blasphemy.—Now the ghost of a dead relative appeared, and, with looks of kindness and recognition, beckoned me to sunny groves, blue skies, and flashing water falls; and now the ghostly shape of some well remembered criminal, some gory murderer, passed before my excited mind, appalling and terrifying. I felt that I was awake, and in full life; but my mental faculties seemed in some degree beyond my control; the spirtual had obtained the mastery over the physical and intellectual, and I lingered midway between sleeping and waking existence. A sort of mental dream was upon me. I had given way too fully to the influence of the dark hour; had yielded too readily to the moodiness of my nature; had lost in some degree the control as well of my mental as of my physical being.

Thus it was when, starting from the temporary stupor, I felt a hand upon my shoulder. In an instant the mist faded from my eyes. I turned and recognized the features of an old and much respected citizen. For a moment we gazed upon each other with looks of surprise and enquiry, as if wondering at such a meeting, and in such a place. I frankly confessed the condition of my thoughts, and narrated the almost involuntary manner in which I had visited the grave-yard.

"Beware," exclaimed the old man "beware of the indulgence of such features. The human mind is too weak to be trusted even with those who have years and experience on their side. How much less, then, is it to be depended upon, when the imagination runs wild, and the youthful spirit soars above and beyond the bounds of reason—when we give a free scope to the fancy, and quiting earth and the things of earth, lose ourselves in wild and visionary meditations, that we know not where?"

I looked somewhat abashed, for the manner rather than the matter of my companion, together with his keen and inquiring look into my eyes, gave rise to a suspicion that he apprehended some fitful fever of the brain."

"But," he suddenly continued, "don't blush young man; don't blush. There are few of us who do not at times, or who have not gone astray for a season, during the crazy pilgrimage of life, although few have the honesty to confess it."

I assured him that he was in error, at least as to my case. But he said he was somewhat of a monomaniac with regard to suicide, never heard of an instance of self-destruction without sympathizing deeply with the victim, and had visited the tombs on that occasion with the object of kneeling by the side of a fresh grave. "The grave," he added, and his voice softened as he spoke, "of youth, genius, and despair!"

"Indeed!" I exclaimed, "I should like to hear the story."

"That cannot be," he added; "at least, not for some years. It was the last request of the too sensitive victim. But," he continued, "I will briefly detail to you an incident in my own life, in order to explain to my sympaty with, or rather pity for, the self murder—ay, the epithet is a harsh one, but it is properly and justly applied. My own case, too is not without its moral.

"I am an Englishman by birth—the only son of pa-
