 It has been the fashion with our opponents to the arge these evil consequences on the dem-vioratic party, but Mr Denny has a clearer perception of their origin, and attributes them all to Mr Clay's Com-promise.
 The friends of Mr Denny, at the meeting, took the ground that his notions of Mr Clay and his course on the Compromise Bill were correct and proper—that Mr Clay's conduct was not in accordance with his for wiew, nor with the principles of the 'great whig party,' as they are now proclaimed. This was bold
 Is a friend of the principles of the 'great whig party,' as they are now proclaimed. This was bold ground, but, it was assumed fearlessly, and advocated with great vigor, and, as the result showed, with sucrosse. has been referred to; and we have permitted the novel course to be pursued of admitting evidence to show what that opinion was. The point is stated by Mr Hampton as follows: "That as the act of assembly "points out the particular mode of bringing a petition-"ing debtor before a jury for trial, for any fact which "if proven, would have prevented his discharge, by the court is a bar to any proceedings "against him in any other way than that pointed out by "the act for commitment and trial within the time "specified." We trust we feel a proper regard for the pinions of the president judge, and we are happy when we can concur with him. But we protest against the assumption, that his mere opinion, individua pressed, and in the formation and declaration of which the associate judges were not consulted, shall be con-sidered as a judicial decision binding on this court.— If this decision is to be binding, let it be fully and fairv discussed. We admit that the act 1836, does point out a particular mode of bringing a petitioning debtor in cer-tain cases to trial, and that in such cases he shall be committed, and have his trial within the time speci-fied.
