An extraordinary sensation was created in Jersey city, on Tuesday, by the fall of a substance resembling bloody flesh, in pieces varying from the size of a dime to a twenty-five cent piece. The rumor of the mysterious shower soon spread around the city, says the N.

AND WORKINGMAN York Sun, and the people gathered from all quarters to examine the substance. We confess the affair is rather strange, and calculated to puzzle the wisest space, probably not over eight hundred feet square; and the flakes resembled pieces of bloody flesh more closely than any thing to which we can compare them. Wherever she flakes fell on linen, the 'blood' gradually spread over the cloth, leaving a thick, fleshy substance in the centre of the stain, which gave out an offensive, the shower were almost all well stocked with newly washed garments, and the flakes fell so thick that even the smallest garments were stained; all having to be ediately.
