As I was saying, Miss Morgan the attachment I have; and I felt it a matter of delicacy to come in person, thinking that my own means might be considered. if there was any deficiency in the value of the property.' Mr. Rhoades, you seem to be rather enigmatical."
I, novertheless, said Mr. R., mean to speak very plainly, when I say that with reference to this attachment, Miss Morgan, should you honor me so far as to accept my proposition, my pecuniary means would be devoted to the attachment. 'I was,' said Miss Morgan, 'wholly unprepared for I was afraid that was the case, said Mr. Rhoades and therefore I thought it more delicate to make the offer in person.'

'You are very considerate, Mr. Rhoades.' Am I then to understand, Miss Morgan, that my proposition is agreeable to you?—in other words that 'Mr. Rhondes,' said the lady, with much hesitancy, must cluim a little time to think of it.' 'I will call, then, on my return from the village.'
Let me ask a little more time,' axid she, 'say next

'Miss Morgan,' suid Mr. Rhoades, 'the matter requires an immediate answer; the attachment is of an old date, and time now is every thing. My feelings are deeply interested; and may I not hope that while you are using so short a time to consider the subject, which you are pleased to view of such great delicacy with regard to yourself, you will allow my wishes and feelings to weigh with you in deciding in favor of my proposition, which, I assure you, is made after due cliberation upon my ability to perform my part of the

Mr. Rhondes then took his leave, astonished at his induced volubility, which indeed, nothing could have induced but his desire to relieve one so much esteemed as Miss Morgan from present embarrassment.

Mr. Rhoades drove to the neighboring place, deeply occupied with his good purpose towards Miss Morgan, satisfying himself that the pecuniary sacrifice he had proposed was due to his untold and unknown affections for her, and not be youd his means.

Miss Morgan felt a renewal of all those foelings which had rather been dormant than quenched in ber ransient customers. He solicits a share of public pawho was unfortunately absent. That Mr. Rhodes once felt a strong attachment for her, she could be doubt, that he had continued to cherish, as he had

'Nay, then, it is accepted,' said Mr Rhodes, with a vivacity that Miss Morgan thought would have bro't him to ber lips-her hand at least. How happy you have made me; said Mr Rhodes, having now disposed of this matter there are tan days allowed.'

'That's very short, said Miss Morgan, only ten days: You speak rather abstracted by Bhodes."

But truly, very truly, Miss Jamen. But why limit us to ten days?

The attachment requires it. 'I thought,' said she, smiling, 'the attachment would se for life.

Ma Rhodes looked exceedingly confused. At length Mr.Rhodes looked exceedingly confused. At length he started suddenly towards the lady.

My dear Miss Morgan, it is possible, that for once in my life, I have bundered into the right path? Can I have been so fortunately misconceived?

'If there is any suitable,' said Miss Morgan, I hape it will be cleared up immediately. I can sectionly be its suitable of the former of the former in the distribution of the distrib
