PITTEBURGH, PA. THURSDAY MORNING, MARCH 14, 1844. STEAMER WAPELLO.—The Glagsow Pilot, of the 9th ult., thus notices Captain Eaton's new steamer: This splendid steamer arrived at the port of Glasgew n Tuesday evening last. The Pitts. and St Louis peers have not been too lavish in their encomiums on the Vapelle, for it is truly the handsomest and best furnishd boat which has ever come up the Missouri river .-"he cabin and especially the ladies cabin -- is elegant y furnished—the state rooms commodious. Great uccess to Capt Eaton and his new boat."

HANDS AND HEARTS. Many are the meanings which are put upon hands sere is nothing so intelligible as the use to which these rords are applied. We say of one man that he has a east, and of another that he has none. We say that his man is a bad hand at his trade, and another is a ood hand. Sometimes we see a bill in a shop-window rhich says, "Hands wanted," or "A few hands ranted." Sometimes we are invited to take a kand cards-and sometimes we say we have no heart to nbout a disagrecable business. Hearts are never heritsed for in the shop windows. We never see ills printed with "Hearts wanted." There is somening more mysterious about a heart than a hand; but et even the most stupid amongst us can perceive that earts are in demand, and more frequently and earnesthe hands. The Creator has distributed verious gifts menget his creatures, and whilst he has given warm easts and cool hands to some, he has given warm cands and cool hearts to others. Let not the one class lespise the other, for each has a noble function to fulif in the great economy of human society, and the ser-ices of each are alike indispensable. How very useul to society, though, perhaps, hurful to themselves, ire men of aident minds, sanguine temperaments, eckless, headstrong, fearless, disposition; wild and what the rost of the world regard as impossibilities!
The world is kept muving by such men. They destroy hemselves too often by the intensity of their mental abord but they give an impulse to the affairs of men which continually and successively revives them from ime to time, and prevents the mind and the industry facciety from sinking into imbecility. Other men, more (ortunate in life, to all outward appearances, are merely the agents of such restless spirits, who reduce to practice their wild and extravagant theories. The e class has a warm heart, the other a warm handbut how very useless would the one be without the other! What would the man of genius be without the cool resolute heart of the man of prudence and worldly worth, which is all demonstrated at last by practical office with fidelity and impartiality.
