LARGE GUNS. mous size have long been known in Europe. At the siege of Constantinople by the Turks, under Mahomet II in 1463 in 1463, cannons were used which required two hundred pounds for a charge, and thick a hall weigh-ing eight hundred pounds. Some of these enormous engines still exist in the fortifications at the Dardanelles, and were used against the fleet of Admirul Duckwarth, when he forced that passage in 1810. One of these lurge balls, cut from a block of marble, and weighing seven hundred and forty pounds, struck the admiral's first rate line of battle ship between decks, and inade prible havoe. The account of this engagement says that the sailors were aghast with terror on witnessing the destructive power of these balls; a predicament by no means usual for English sailors. Therefore such heavy cannon can be used, and they rove what is proved in all cases with smaller cannon, that size is the measure of power.
