MR. O'CONNELL'S SPEECH. By the arrival at New York copies of Mr. O'Conmell'a speech in defence of himself against the charge of conspiracy has been received. The following is an abstract of it:-

The court was crowded with an immena ager listoners.
Mr. O'Connell disclaimed having ever violated any law or having ever been actuated by any motive save a desire to serve his country He, however, acknowledged himself a repealer, and avows that, with the most upright intentions his acts, since he first began that course of conduct which had brought him before shelf lordships, his end and object had been the repeal of the Union. "I tell you (he exclaimed) I cananot bear it—it was forced upon the Irish people by jority. THE ELECTION.—The returns come in slowly, the roads being very bad and the heavy rain for the past two days have doubtless kept them back. Mr. DAR-RAGH, the whig candidate is elected by about 500 matial returns we have received, and as the return judges meet to-day we will be able to give the official result to-morrow. Our friends abroad, will observe one thing -that the opposition polled their full vote, while we will fall at least a thousand short of our usual poll .--Their candidate is elected by about 500, and every behalf of the repeal being charged upon him as a con-spiracy, and displayed with much power and biting body can judge what sort of a Clay victory our election would have been, if the democrate had turned our in their strength.

The constitution of the Bible in the Public Schools has caused a great deal of excitement in Philadelphia lately. The constitution of the schools refused to admit it as a school refused to a school book, which caused quite a number of meetings to be held and a great deal of indignation manifested. The Catholics and the Pope came in for their full share of denunciation, and so many falso statements were made and so great an effort to lead the public mind astray on the subject, that the Bishop has published a statement setting forth the views of the Catholics on this matter, from which we make the following extracts:

He sold all his clocks but one, and then started information will be given. on his return, with his pockets well filled with the At the first place our friend called, there were loud complaints of deception, and of the worthlessness of the article as a time-keeper. He regretted extremely that it should be so, but as there was one defective clock in his load, he remarked, which he had no means of finding out, except upon trial, he feared that par-ticular clock was the unfortunate one they had purchased. He would cheerfully exchange it for the superior one he had remaining. Having got out of this ilemma, he continued calling at the places where he prays that your honors will be pleased to grant him a had sold clocks on his outward bound trip, and exchanging them in rotation all along the road, easing his conscience by saying that whenever he found a clock defective, he gladly exchanged it for another. It is needless to say that there was a dreadful "clicking" of tongues among the house-wives for months after, where the clock vender had passed; and to this day, whenever the dinner hour arrives, all parties are apt to be sadly out of time as well as out of tune.

Itinerating dentists are not unlike these fictitious clock pedlars. At least those snag eradicators some times have imputed to them just such strange vagaries as our clock friends. We can only sny that in both cases, doubtless, there is extreme exuggeration. Not many years since, a dentist went through the western part of Massachusetts. Like the clock vender, every part of Massachusetts.
