If this is correct our opponents admit that the democratic party must be something near thirty thousand strong in the city of New York, and that the whig strength is not more than thirteen or fourteen thousand. Although we have lost the city • officers, yet in the aspect presented by our political enemics of the position of parties, it is evident that the democrats have a sweeping majority in the city, which will be sufficient to crush federalism into the earth when they have a fair contest between the two parties, unconnected with any local questions or pre-
