THE TRUE WAY TO RECOVER HEALTH.

☞ An individual only wishes to know the right way to pursue it; and there are none, were it surely made known how LIFE might be prolonged and Health recovered, who would not doubt the plan.—Evidence is required that the right way is discovered. This is what those suffering from sickness want to be satisfied about. For who is so foolish as not to enjoy all the health that his body is capable of? Who is there that would not live when his experience can so much benefit himself and family? It is a melancholy fact that a very large proportion of the most useful members of society die between the ages of thirty and forty. How many widows and helpless orphans have been the consequence of mankind not having in their own power the means of restoring health when lost.

Now all these dangers and difficulties can be prevented and the long and certain sickness, and by assisting nature in the outset, with a good dose of Brandreth's Pills. This is a fact well understood to be so by thousands of our citizens. This medicine, if taken so as to purge freely, will surely cure any curable disease.—There is no form or kind of sickness that it does not exert a curative influence upon. Thus, by their power in resisting putrefaction, they cure measles, small pox, worms and all contageous fevers. There is not a medicine in the world so able to purify the mass of blood, and restore it to a healthy condition, as the Brandreth Pills.

The Brandreth Pills are purely vegetable, and so innocent that the infant of a month old may use them, if medicine is required, not only with safety but with a certainty of receiving all the benefit medicine is capable of imparting. Females may use them in all the critical periods of their lives. The Brandreth Pills will insure their health, and produce regularity in all the functions of life,

The same may be said of Brandreth's external remedy, as an outward application to all external pains or swellings, or sores, it greatly assists the cure.—When used where the skin is very tender or broken, it should be mixed with one or two pints of water.

A sure test of genuine Brandreth Pills.—Examine the box of Pills. Then look at the certificate of agency, whose engraved date must be within the year, which every authorised agent must possess; if the three labels on the box agree with the three labels on the certificate, the Pills are true—if not, they are false.

Principal office, 241 Broadway, New York.

IMPORTANT FACTS.

DR. LEIDY'S Sarsaparilla Blood Pills are applicable in all cases, whether for Purgatives or Purification, They possess all the boasted virtues of other pills, and are additionally efficacious, containing Sarsaparilla in their composition, which is not contained in any other pills in existence. They are also different from other pills in composition, being purely vegetable, and can be employed at all times, without any danger, and requiring no restraint from occupation or usual course of living.

Notwithstanding Dr. Leidy never pretended his Blood Pills would cure all diseases, yet it is not saying too much of them, from the innumerable cures performed by them in every variety and form of disease (certificates of many of which have been published from persons of all denominations, physicians, clergymen, and others) that they seem to be almost universal in their effect; and persons using them for whatever sickness or disease, may rest assured that they will be found more efficacious than any other pills in existance.

From the known reputation of Dr. Leidy's Blood Pill, it is necessary to remind the public where they can at all times procure the genuine, as it is attempted to impose other pills, called the 'Blood Pills' upon the public on the reputation of Dr. Leidy's. ☞ Be particular and ask for Dr. Leidy's Sarsaparilla Blood Pills and see that the name of N. B. Leidy is contained on two sides of each box, (the boxes being of paper, and oblong, square shape, surrounded by a yellow and black label.

PRICE—25 cents a Box.

Prepared only, and sold wholesale and retail, at Dr. Leidy's Health Emporium, 191 North Second street, below Vine, Philadelphia, and by B. A. FAHNESTOCK & CO., corner of Wood and Sixth streets, Agents for Pittsburgh. jy 12—1y

The Daily Morning Post,

From the Democratic Review of February.

Resignation.

A TALE, TRANSLATED FROM THE FRENCH.

(Concluded.)

"I cannot leave them! replied Ursula, with a look of deep distress at the two old people asleep in their arm chairs.

"Do you love me?" said Maurice to his betrothed, The poor girl replied only by a torrent of tears.

Maurice remained a long time with her. He spoke a thousand sweet words of tenderness, he explained to her a hundred times their position, brought into her mind the conviction that what she had dreamed was impossible, entered into the details of the future life of her parents, and then left her, after having showered upon her a thousand expressions of tenderness, she had allowed him to speak without replying.

Ursula remained alone, her head bent down on her hands, and moved not for several hours. Alas! the early happiness which for so short a time had brightened her life was gone. Sweet dreams, the friends of all young souls, had only come to depart again. Forgetfulness, silence, obscurity, again took possession of this sad existence, which happiness had for a moment disputed with them. Thus the night passed away. What passed in the heart of the poor girl, God only saw. She, she never spoke of it on earth.

Early in the morning she started, closed the window, which had been open since the evening before, and pale and trembling with emotion, she sought pen and paper, and wrote as follows:

"Farewell, Maurice! I will remain with my mother and father. They need my labor and my cares. To abandon them in their old age, would be to kill them. They have only me in the world! My sister, with her last breath, confided them to me, and said 'We shall meet again, Ursula!' But I should not see her again if I did not fulfil my duties.

"I have loved you very much. I shall always love you! My life will be but a remembrance of you. You have been good, generous; but alas! we are too poor to be married. I understood it yesterday. Farewell! it requires all my courage to write that word! I hope that your life will be happy. Another woman, more happy than I, will love you! But never entirely forget poor Ursula. Farewell, my friend! I know well that I never could be happy. URSULA."

I must shorten my story. Ursula saw me, saw Maurice again. But all our prayers, our supplications were in vain; she would never leave her parents, "I must work for them!" said she.

In vain I spoke to her of Maurice's happiness, of his love. In vain, with a kind of cruelty, I spoke to her of her age, and of the hopelessness of her having another opportunity to change her destiny. She listened to me, her tears falling fast upon the work which she would not interrupt. Then, with her head bent upon her breast, she repeated in a low voice: "They would die, I must work for them!" She made us promise that we would not inform her mother of what had passed. Those for whom she sacrificed herself were ignorant of it. A pious falsehood deceived them in regard to the breaking off of their daughter's engagement. Ursula resumed her seat by the window, recommenced her embroideries, and worked without relaxation, silent, pale, broken.

Alas! Maurice D'Erval was one of those wise and prudent souls which assign limits even to devotion.—His heart, like his reason, admitted impossible things. If the marriage of Ursula had taken place without obstacle, perhaps she would have believed to the last moment of her life in the happiness of her husband. There are affections that need as easy faith. Such was Maurice D'Erval's; and when there came a barrier to be overcome, he saw and acknowledged the limits of his love. Maurice begged, went, a long time, then became discouraged and went away.

One day while Ursula was sitting by her window, she heard in the distance military music, and heavy and measured steps sounded in her ears, it was the regiment departing, with music at its head. Trembling, she listened. The music, at first brilliant and quite near to her, soon softened in the distance; then from after it reached her ears only in an uncertain manner; then the wind brought only an isolated sound, and at last succeeded an entire silence. The last hope of Ursula's life seemed to be attached to those distant tones; it died, passed away, was extinguished with them. She, poor girl! let her work fall upon her knees, and hid her face in her hands. A few tears forced themselves between her fingers. She remained thus while the music and tread of the regiment were to be heard; then resumed her work. She resumed it for her life.

The evening of the day of this eternal seperation, the day on which this great sacrifice was consummated, Ursula, after having rendered to her parents the cares with which she terminated each day, seated herself at the foot of her mother's bed, and bent over it a face that the blind woman could not see was wet with tears. Taking her hand gently, the poor abandoned betrothed murmured in a voice full of emotion.

"Mother! you love me, do you not? Is not my presence a pleasure to you? My cares, are the most sweet, my mother? You would not let me leave you, would you?"

The blind woman turned her head towards the wall and said.

"Mercy! Ursula, I am tired; let me sleep!"

The words of tenderness which she had sought as the sole recompense of her unhappy devotion, were not pronounced. The old blind woman fell asleep in the act of repulsing the hand which her daughter held out to her. But between the green serge curtains of the alcove, there was an image of Christ carved in wood, defaced by time. Poor Ursula stretched towards her God the hands which there was no friend on earth to press, and sinking down on her knees by the bedside of her blind mother, she remained a long time in prayer.

After that day, Ursula became more pale, more silent than ever. New tears bore away the last vestiges of her youth and beauty. Now she could please no one; but had it been in her power, Ursula would not have desired it! "All is sad!" were words which she had already pronounced; now, indeed, all was sad for her!

No more was heard of Maurice D'Erval. Ursula had pleased, like a beautiful picture, whose unlooked-for moved his soul; but in absence, the colors of the picture faded, and then became entirely effaced. He forgot!

Oh God! how can such things be forgotten? Why has not Heaven, which in many hearts has permitted habit to deaden love, at least granted to those who are separated the faculty of remembering?

A year after these events, Ursula's mother fell sick. Her illness was not of a kind for which there are remedies; it was life passing away. Ursula watched, prayed by the bed side of her mother, and received with her last breath her blessing. "Martha," said Ursula, "our mother is now near to thee! Conduct her to God!"

Then she fell on her knees by the bedside of the old man who remained alone. She [illegible] mourning on him without his perceiving it; but the [illegible] day after the death of the poor blind woman, when they had carried away the chair upon which [illegible] so many years been seated by his side, [illegible] turned towards the vacant place and [illegible] Ursula spoke to him, tried to sooth [illegible] "My wife!" and tears rolled [illegible] In the evening they offered him food, [illegible] his head, fixed his eyes upon the [illegible] with a voice full of sadness, said [illegible] "My wife!"

Ursula, in despair, tried all that her grief could suggest. The blind old man remained bent towards the spot where his wife had been, and refusing all nourishment, with his head clasped, he seemed as Ursula and repeated like a child who begs for something which it desires: "My wife!"

A moment after he died.
