The following little bit of domestic romance wants confirmation. The Boston Times should have told how it came by the information:

"SEDDEN APPEARANCE .--- A man well known "SCREEK AFFRANKEL." A man wer known in Pittsburgh, disappeared some few years ago, and his wife receiving rotidings of him, applied for a divorce and married another. While comfortably sented at byt freade conversing with her new husband, she beard the well known tread of her first lord upon the tread and hyperbolic sented at the sentence of the se stairs, and he catered overjoyed to meet her, and aning his intentions to give up his roving life. Husband No.2 looked aghast and not writing for explanation rushed out of the house, but after some time had etapsed he returned to make an anticable proposition la husbatid number one would assign his right and ti-the to to the lady, number two will act the part of a faithfal husband to her; but if number one willfuot a ssign, "why number two has no objections to do so, and here, the paper says, the matter rests for the present."
