THE TRUE WAY TO RECOVER .

HEALTH. An individual only wishes to know the right way to pursue it; and there are none, were it surely made known how Life might be prolonged and Health recovered, who would not doubt the plan!-Evidence is required that the right way is discovered Office in Second street, next door to Mulvany & Co.'s This is what those suffering from sickness want to be attisfied about. For who is so foolish as not to enjoy there that would not live when his experience can so Robinson & McBride, Attorneys at Law much benefit himself and family? It is a melancholy fact that a very large proportion of the most useful members of society die between the ages of thirty and forty. How many widows and helpless orphans have been the consequence of mandkind not having in their own power the means of restoring health when losts Now all these dangers and difficulties can be prevented and the long and certain sickness, and by assisting inture in the outset, with a good dose of Brandreth's Fills. This is a fact, well understood to be so by thou-sands of our citizens. This medicine, if taken so as to purge freely, will surely cure any curable disease.—
There is no form gorkind of sickness that it does not exert a curative influence upon. Thus, by their power in resisting putrefaction, they cure measles, small pox. worms and all contageous fevers There is not a medicine in the world so able to purify the mass of blood, and restore it to a healthy condition, as the

The Daily Morning Past.

From Graham's Magazine for April, HATE AND PATE, A SEA STORY.

From the Diary of Burkhardt, the Pilet. BY MRS. E. P. ELLET. I can remember nothing of my earliest childhood, except that I lived in a narrow and silent street, in Hamburg, or rather an alley, too close to allow of the passage of carriages. I was called "Heinrich" by the old woman who mok care of me, and by the few poor people who came to visit her was always dressed with rather more care than the other children in the neighborhood, and every Christmas I received a haud-some present of toys and other nice things. When I asked why other children had a (ather and mother, and

I remember receiving visits, at long intervals, and always after dusk, from a lady closely wrapped in a mantle, who used to send for no in the little parlor and caress me affectionately, and who rarely wear away without leaving me some little present. Her face, as I recollect distinctly, was pals and ead, but very beautiful, and its sweet sorrowful expression pro-

ner, and I began to get tired of going to school. One day a man of stately figure presented himself at our door, and inquired for me. He gave me a salutation from the lady above mentioned, whom I had not seen for three years, and informed me that he was about to change the course of my life. It was time, he said that I should choose an occupation which could rem der me a useful citizen.

This exactly suited my wishes, for I had looked hortest notice. The subscriber believes that his long examination, it was determined that I should be a my old nurse, for she had always treated me with the greatest indifference. I had hitherto felt alone, baving no one to sympathize with me, or to share my thoughts, now the whole world was open to me; all my past sor-rows were forgotten, and the future seemed decked in the brightest colors.

I became a sailor; henceforth my narrative must, fter the fashion of my craft, assume the character of a I was well received by Captain Borcher; he asked me a few questions, and engaged me as cabin boy, at eighteen marks a month. I entered at once upon my service. In the afternoon came the friendly man who had recommended me to this place; he brought me a seaman's chest, full of clothes, bed-linen, and books—with an inventory of every thing, I was completely furnished. may 8. No Liberty st. head of Wood.

1 good, my son! but control your feelings, and behave not so as to provoke the raillery of your comrades. Now go-and see that breakfast is soon ready for this

> I obeyed; and as they both descended into the cabin he captain called to me above to bring him his glass. I did so, and was standing near, awaiting his farther a bow, said: 'Captain, is not the old man who came on board the day we sailed to go on the voyage as a steerage pas-Exactly,' answered the captain; 'it was so he took 'If that is the case, captain,' continued the boatswain, we all beg of you to give him a place between the decks to sleep. I say it not on my own account, I speak in the name of the men. He can est with the sailors, but not sleep with them—and for the simple reason that he does not choose to sleep at all. He is so restless that he cannot lie still, nor be silent for five minutes together, and he does not mind disturbing us. Now, captain, we have to do our work, and we must 'Go along; you shall not be overtasked; I will speak parations of my own, The weather all that day was rough and stormy, and neither the lady nor her companion appeared on deck. Toward night I saw the old man, who had been told the captain wished to see.

im, go up and enquire what was wanted, His mana er was courteous but gnarded. 'Master Wilner,' said the captain, as he motioned, him to a seat on a poultry coop near, and scated him-self beside him, 'I have given you passage to the West, Indies in my vessel, but it was understood that year should be quiet, and give no cause of complaint. How is this? all my men complain of you, that you distuct their rest by your singular behaviour. They desire that you be not permitted to sleep below. I charge you to let me hear no more of this, for if to-morrow I find the disturbance has been repeated, I shall be under-

THE undersigned, having associated thamselves the necessity of giving you a place to sleep amping the barrels and boxes betweep the flecks.

I will do what I can, replied the uld man, sullents well as renting of city and country property, collecting rents &c. &c.
