POR THE POST. LINES Found in an all bandlon, and neb first published When twilight's rays are landing.

To daylight's parting beam, And dark and light are blending In one unbroken dream Of peace, there is a feeling As memory comes stealing, And through my soul revealing Of by-gone days a gleam.

Lawed forms that once were treading Life's fairy path with me, When youth and hope were shedding Unbounded joy and glee; The past in all its brightness Comes swift on memory's wing, But brings not half the brightness To me it once did bring-

When this false dream is over. And I depart away, May I with them then hover In an eternal day; With holy, joyous greeting, I'll bail the happy meeting, And quit earth's joys so fleeting, To welcome rest for aye.

Will friends I leave behind me, E'er think of me when gone? Oh! may each loved one join me, Those happy shores upon ; Where angel harps are stringing, 'And cherubim are singing. A veil o'er past griefs flinging, When earth's vain dream is done.

Scene in the Theatre, Hobart Town. - Mrs Clarke has adopted a method of preventing blackguardism in the boxes of her theatre; and it says much for the 'lower orders' that it is found in no other part of the house.

On Monday evening, four drunken blackguards who had assumed the character (masquerading is all the fashion) of gentleman, not only annoyed the audience and literally stopped the performance by their continand merany supped the performance by their continued interruption, but carried their blackguardism (we can find so ether appropriate word) to the highest pitch, by throwing a potatoe at Mrs. Clarke, when in the middle of one of her finest songs. The spirited these then being in the 'costume' of Macheath with the whip in her hand, without a moment's delay, went round to the box, and whinned the blackguards out to the box. round to the box, and whipped the blackguards out!-It was well done .- Murray's Austral Asiatic Re

A Wolf in Sheep's Clothing.—The New Haven (Conu) papers state that the Rev, Mr. Rnine, a Primitive Methodist minister, an Englishman by birth, who has been settled for a year or two over a small congre gation in that city, and has been considered a very explary man, has just been tried by a co his brethren, and convicted of gross misconduct, which ha confessed, and immediately after fled. By his own confession, he has misled from the path of virtue tw Greates of his church—both of whom have been at different times servants in his family. He has decamped, leaving an amiable wife and an interesting family of children without the means of support.
