IMPORTANT FACTS.

DR. LEIDY'S Sarsaparilla Blood Pills are applicable in all cases, whether for Purgatives or Purification. They possess all the boasted virtues of other pills, and are additionally efficacious, containing Sarsaparilla in their composition, which is not contained in any other pills in existence. They are also different from other pills in composition, being purely vegetable, and can be employed at all times, without any danger, and requiring no restraint from occupation or usual course of living.

Notwithstanding Dr. Leidy never pretended his Blood Pills would cure all diseases, yet it is not saying too much of them, from the innumerable cures performed by them in every variety and form of disease (certificates of many of which have been published from persons of all denominations, physicians, clergymen, and others) that they seem to be almost universal in their effect; and persons using them for whatever sickness or disease, may rest assured that they will be found more efficacious than any other pills in existence.

From the known reputation of Dr. Leidy's Blood Pill, it is necessary to remind the public where they can at all times procure the genuine, as it is attempted to impose other pills, called the 'Blood Pills' upon the public on the reputation of Dr. Leidy's. ☞ Be particular and ask for Dr. Leidy's Sarsaparilla Blood Pills and see that the name of N B. Leidy is contained on the two sides of each box, (the boxes being of paper, and oblong, square shape, surrounded by a yellow and black label.

PRICE—25 cents a Box.

Prepared only, and sold wholesale and retail, at Dr. Leidy's Health Emporium, 191 North Second street, below Vine, Philadelphia, and by B. A. FAHNESTOCK & CO., corner of Wood and Sixth streets, Agents for Pittsburgh. jy 12—1y

THE FIRENHAMMER.
A STORY OF RETRIBUTIVE JUSTICE.
FOUNDED ON A GERMAN FACT.

It would have been difficult, and perhaps impossible, throughout all Germany, to find a nobleman more beloved and idolized by his tenantry and vassals, than Wilhelm, Count of Savern. A warrior in the field, and a profound statesman in the cabinet, his subjects and retainers rewarded the exertions he had made to increase their prosperity and happiness with the most devoted affection and unshaken fidelity. The territory of Savern under his dominion became the most flourishing tract of land in Germany, and a perfect paradise in comparison with the desolate and uncultivated provinces by which it was surrounded, and it was ever with an erect mein, and a swelling chest, that an inhabitant of this part of the world declared himself a follower of the noble house of Savern.

The happy and prosperous condition of his vassals, the high cultivation of his lands, and the devoted attachment of all around to his person, plainly declared him to be a wise and sagacious ruler. There perhaps was crime committed in his dominions, but when such did occur, the criminal found the avenging sword of justice speedily and invariably overtake him, and it was remarkable that no crime committed in the boundaries of Savern, had ever yet escaped unpunished or unavenged. His love of peace was great, but in those turbulent times, war often becomes absolutely necessary, and it was not the wont of the house of Savern to allow their privileges to be encroached on, or to suffer indignity or insult from the proudest prince in Christendom.

Some three years previous to the period in which our tale commences, Wilhelm was compelled to proceed to Vienna on business immediately connected with the interests of the province. George, Count of Ribbeck-Savern, laid by mutual agreement, the two candidates placed the decision of their respective claims in the hands of Maximilian II. Emperor of Austria.

This dispute called Wilhelm to Vienna, and he had already passed some days in this capital, when one evening, while engaged in preparing some papers relative to the discussion, a horseman galloped into the court-yard of his hotel, threw himself from his foaming steed, and without a moment's delay, flung up the narrow and winding stairs, and burst into the chamber of the lord of Savern.

"Sigismund, by Heaven!" cried the astonished nobleman.

Sigismund threw himself on a bench entirely from fatigue.

"What tidings, Sigismund—what tidings?"

"Ill tidings, my lord, from your good town of Trustadt."

"Speak, Sigismund—out with them, man."

"Treustadt is in the possession of Georgo, of Rauberschloss."

The count leaped from his seat, drew his hand across his brow, and then, with one mighty effort mastering his feelings, he calmly requested Sigismund to proceed.

The Count of Savern heard him to the end of his tale, which was a melancholy one. Four days after that man's departure, Georgo of Rauberschloss assembled his vassals and retainers, and sallied out against Treustadt, determined to take advantage of Wilhelm's absence, and seize upon that town by force, to which he claims and pretensions in equity would never have succeeded in surprizing the town and citadel, but the inhabitants, with the chief magistrate at their head, a fat but honest and gallant man, ran to arms and attacked the intruders with such desperation and fury, that it required the whole force of the trained and warlike bands, and the powerful arm and assistance of Georgo of Rauberschloss himself to compel these civic assailants to retire, and the many lifeless corses which covered the bulpstrasse plainly told the steel of the sons of Treustadt, unaccustomed as they were to wield the sword and the spear, could bite deep through helm and corslet when fighting for their country and their homes. The citizens were overpowered and Gerard Dickbaugh, the magistrate, was forced with the remnant of his command, which had suffered severely in the bloody fray, to retire toward Savern, where preparations for war were already began; and Sigismund concluded his narrative by informing him that his return was looked forward to with the greatest anxiety.

"Cold tidings, indeed," cried the count, "I trust, good Sigismund there is not more to relate?"

"There is more ill yet, my lord—George of Rauberschloss has taken the castle of Edelstein."

"And the Lady Adelheid?" faltered out the count.

"Carried to Rauberschloss, by directions of its daring and reckless lord."

Wilhelm stood for a few minutes immoveable, this last news appearing quite to overcome him—he stood fixed as a statue, then suddenly shouting to his attendants for horses, himself and Sigismund five minutes after were galloping along the streets of Vienna, at a pace which placed the emperor's subjects in most imminent danger.

The people of Savern were in a state of the greatest excitement, their rage and indignation knew no bounds, and it was with boiling blood and ready hands that they waited for the arrival of their beloved chief, who might now be hourly expected. The warden even now had blown a blast upon his horn, announcing the approach of some stranger, and every eye was strained, every look directed to the road which led to Vienna, along which two horsemen were seen urging their steeds with the velocity of the wind, and a loud and ringing shout rent the air as the gazers recognized in one of the cavaliers William of Savern. A few seconds brought the chief into the midst of his people; he bowed low to the renewed bursts of triumph which broke from the lips of his adherents, and calling for fresh horses for himself and Sigismund, he ordered his banner to be unfurled, put himself at the head of his retainers, and instantly began his march on Treustadt. Gerard Dickbaugh gave a lamentable account of the destruction of property, the loss of life, and the strength of the invaders, but the firm and decided mein of their chief, his known abilities and approved valor, sustained under and anxiety of the more valiant to come to the engagement, when they might show their lawless foes with what rigor an insult offered to the house of Savern was repaid.

It is not my wish to lead thee, dear reader, through the scenes of blood and slaughter which now followed each other in quick succession; suffice it to say, that a sanguinary engagement at Treustadt between the two bands, George was compelled to retreat to his fortress considered impregnable a castle of Rauberschloss, which had endured sieges after sieges longer after longer, and still remained proud and towering, laughing at the impotent exertions of its besiegers. But on this occasion it was otherwise. Whether Wilhelm possessed a greater share of military talent than fell to the lot of its former assailants, or whether the thought of the Lady Adelheid, a person to the Count dearer than all the world beside, a prisoner in the power of the bloody warfare which had desolated her country, three months after, Adelheid of Edelstein became the wife of Wilhelm of Savern, and three years after brings us to the period to which, gentle reader, I am about to introduce thee.

Three years had been a period to the Count and Countess of Savern of the most unclouded happiness; their marriage had already been blessed with a son and daughter; adored by their vassals, they lived and idolized by their subjects, it seemed as if nothing on earth was able to disturb their felicity, when a storm was gathering down bursting on heads, to repair them for former crimes and future dangers. Princes smiled on them and they were happy.

Among all her household there was not one who
