IMPORTANT FACTS.

DR. LEIDY'S Sarsaparilla Blood Pills are applicable in all cases, whether for Purgatives or Purification. They possess all the boasted virtues of other pills, and are additionally efficacious, containing Sarsaparilla in their composition, which is not contained in any other pills in existence. They are also different from other pills in composition, being purely vegetable, and can be employed at all times, without any danger, and requiring no restraint from occupation or usual course of living.

Notwithstanding Dr. Leidy never pretended his Blood Pills would cure all diseases, yet it is not saying too much of them, from the innumerable cures performed by them in every variety and form of disease (certificates of many of which have been published from persons of all denominations, physicians, clergymen, and others) that they seem to be almost universal in their effect; and persons using them for whatever sickness or disease, may rest assured that they will be found more efficacious than any other pills in existence.

From the known reputation of Dr. Leidy's Blood Pill, it is necessary to remind the public where they can at all times procure the genuine, as it is attempted to impose other pills, called the 'Blood Pills' upon the public on the reputation of Dr. Leidy's. Be particular and ask for Dr. Leidy's Sarsaparilla Blood Pills and see that the name of N B. Leidy is contained on two sides of each box, (the boxes being of paper, and oblong, square shape, surrounded by a yellow and black label.

PRICE—25 cents a Box.

Prepared only, and sold wholesale and retail, at Dr. Leidy's Health Emporium, 191 North Second street, below Vine, Philadelphia, and by B. A. FANESTOCK & CO., corner of Wood and Sixth streets, Agents for Pittsburgh. jy 12—1y

The Daily Morning Post.

THE EISENHAMMER,
A STORY OF RETRIBUTIVE JUSTICE.
FOUNDED ON A GERMAN FACT.

(Concluded.)

The hunt was unsuccessful, and during their return home, Robert determined to commence his plans of revenge by instilling into the Countess breast doubts of his good and virtuous wife. After some conversation, in which he had been showing how happy all the blessings he enjoyed should render him, he continued—

"There is besides one more blessing, my lord, which I have not enumerated."

"Indeed! and what is that?"

"It is this Lady Aldelheld, Countess of Savern, high-born, noble, generous, and amiable."

"You are eloquent, my lord, but just. You, my lord, are never troubled by that arch-fiend jealousy!"

"No, indeed! I know Adelheld too well, far too well; but how came you with the question?"

Robert hesitated.

"How came you with the question?"

"You can lie down, my lord, upon your pillow, fully trusting in your noble lady's honor and discretion!"

"What mean you Robert, with these demands? The Lady Adelheld—"

"Is chaste. I'll swear; trust me, my lord, he never can seduce her."

The blood rushed from Wilhelm's heart, his eye flashed, scarcely able to contain himself, the count commanded him to speak.

"I do not say, my lord, that he has dared."

"Dared! I think not. Seducer in Savern there may be, but one who, in his wildest dreams, could raise his thoughts to Adelheid of Savern, lives not."

"Right, my lord—forget the slave who dares——"

"And does he live! name him."

"A slave my lord, a low born slave."

"In mercy name him."

"Merits contempt and scorn, disdain——"

"Name him—or you die."

"Fridolin, the steward."

It was with difficulty the count kept himself in his saddle. Robert felt that he had the fate of his enemy in his hands, he continued.

"The boy owns a pretty face, and is much famed for great success among the fair sex.—How strange, my lord, you never marked him—his eyes never leave her, and when at table, he forgets his lord is present, and stands as if enchanted at his lady's side."

The council in his silence drank in his poisonous discourse; he was fast losing all command of his impetuous passion.

"More proof," he gasped, "More proof, before I slay the traitor."

Robert triumphantly produced the verses. The count perused them rapidly, uttered a cry of despair, dashed his spurs deep in his horse's flanks, and galloped off in the direction of the adjacent forest.

The good steed carried him on at a gallant pace, and a few minutes had elapsed before he had reached the Eisenhammer, situated in the thickest and closest part of the whole forest. This place completely beggars description; no words can give the reader an adequate idea of its horrors.

There was a large and open space, surrounded by ancient trees, which reared high their lofty heads, and seemed to kiss the clouds, their thick foliage guarding the spot from every ray of light. Day was banished, and darkness held reign. It was the principal seat of the iron-works, which are carried on to a great extent in that country. The ore is melted in large furnaces; night and day they are fed with fuel, ever watched, ever flourished, the fire is never suffered to decay. A strong and powerful stream rushes impetuous through the area, and in its course, with power puts in motion mighty wheels attached to mightier mills. The roaring of the stream, the continued ringing of the powderous hammers, the sparks of fire emitted from the heated iron on each successive glow, all contributed to render the appearance of the place infernal, drear and devilish.

Such the place—how for the inhabitants, and I err much if the reader can trace great resemblance to man in my short description for the honor of the human race; I hope little, if any, will be found. Virgil's idea of Cyclop's may with great propriety be applied to them of the Eisenhaw met.

Monstrum horrendum informe ingens cui lumen ademptum: which is perfectly correct, with the exception of cui lumen ademptum; for each of the gentleman now in question possessed two red and bloodshot orbs, which claimed the denomination of eyes.

Reader, imagine, if thy imagination will permit thee, a creature utterly devoid of symmetry and proportion, above six feet high, raw boned, blear-eyed, shaggy brows, long red hair, matted and entangled, streaming down the back, the face begrimmed with smoke and filth, bull-necked, of herculean build, powerful and unwieldy as the elephant, and say if this be aught human—this a man.

The minds of these beings correspond with their outward appearance; shut out from all converse with mankind, they had not imbibed a feeling of that kindness which generally animates the breast of man.—Their hearts were as hard as the metal which they worked, and the pleasure which they took fiercely and crime, showed the natural depravity of their minds.

Wilhelm rode into the midst of these rude inhabitants of the forest, and was saluted by each with a growl of recognition which remained unanswered by their lord, who appeared utterly unconscious of the scene. The works went busily on, the noise of the rushing stream as it dashed impetuously along its course, and the ringing of the hammers continued, but Wilhelm sat on his horse as if he was incapable of motion—suddenly he raised his eyes, and some short time elapsed before he could collect his thoughts and ideas—he seemed surprised to find himself at the Eisenhammer; he gazed round with amazement at the vast furnaces, and wondered how he could have strayed eight miles from the hunt—he saw his favorite steed covered with foam, and his memory began to return; he found a paper crushed up in his right hand, he looked at it, with the speed of lightning all flashed upon his mind.

"Audacious vassal, ingrate Fridolin!" he cried, "thy doom is death, but death were far too merciful."

His eyes suddenly fell upon a furnace, which two of the giants were replenishing with fuel, a savage joy sparkled in his eyes, and he beckoned the two to approach.

"Misogestalt your services are needed."

Misogestalt put himself in a posture of attention.

"You, Krebs, will aid him"

Krebs attempted to bow.

"A man will come here from Savern—he dies."

The hands of the monsters instinctively grasped their knives.

"Not so, Misogestalt, not so, good Krebs, he must suffer—suffer much."

The eyes of the two beamed with delight.

"Throw him in yon heated furnace."

The giants testified their readiness, and Misogestalt inquired—"How know we the victim?"

The count bethought himself. The first man who comes from Savern, and asks if my commands be executed; him cast ye in, and remember that prayers or entreaties avail him not."

The monsters returned to their furnaces with savage glee, again fed the fire, the count was satisfied, and galloped homewards.

Arrived at Savern, Fridolin was summoned to his presence, and the count charged him to proceed immediately to the Eisenhammer, and inquire of Misogestalt if his order had been executed. The unsuspecting youth charged himself with the commission and retired, but before mounting his horse, thinking the Lady Adelheid in the interim might stand in need of his services, he proceeded to her apartments, and informed her of his destination.

"My boy is ill," said the countess, "or I should this morning, have gone to mass; but do thou, Fridolin, before thy ride to the Eisenhammer, enter the chapel
