Deferred Articles. From the Boston Times The Clay Chile of the city are about publishing a book far the children, (of larger growth,) illustrated with chis, and intended to glorify the "mill boy of the sleaker," in the cycs of the millions. A few proof sheets have felter into our hands. The flontispiece represents Harry Clay as the farmer of Ashland monsted as a spiendid herse, and dressed in a suit of superfine broadelosh, bowing to an imaginary Clay Club. To this is appended the following lines: Oh! who is here so fine and grand With a spur on beel and hat in hand?
Tis,—he the farmer of Ashland—
My Harry. Then follows a practical illustration of the patriot-sm and omisistency of the "farmer," preceded by and ningled with some desultory stanzas. Who rede on Dobbin, old and kind, (Mill-ward his father's corn to grind
With this sail fluttering behind? Mill-ward his father's corn to go..... With shirt tail fluttering behind? My Harry. (Effigy of shirt tail.) Who wants to-reach the Union's summit, But still as far as ever from it-Who tried three times and could'nt come it! My Harry. Expraving of Jack and Gill in their involunta-descent from the hill top after the inversion of the pall of total abstinence. "Who is in peace than Moses meeker, - Yet in debate a whole hog steaker? Who said "G-d-n you!" to the Speaker? Who once denounced a monster bank And thought its charter treason rank-Yet now stands up for it, point blank? [Portrait of a gentleman looking two ways for Sunday.] Who headed the Protective clan, And on Free Trade denounced his ban— Yet now he is no Tariff man? My Harry Who once abused old Johnny Q., And said his statements were untrue Yet helped elect him after? Who? Who joined the masons long ago, Took six degrees—he liked it so— Yet tries to Dodge the Order now? Who lateds religion-frowns on vice-Bets high on cocks, and shakes the dice: And thinks a Hell a l'aradise? My Harry. Oh! who to station high was born-(Through adverse fates his flag have torn,) Who'll be elected—'in a horn''?
