

What a change was effected for the public which all that is required for the argument.

The principle of strict construction, would frustrate important provisions of the newly constructed framework of government.

It is provided by the 1st article of the Constitution that the Senate should be composed of two members from each State, chosen for six years; and that "no Senator shall be elected until he has attained to the age of thirty years."

But after they should be assembled, they would be divided into three classes; and that "the principal office of strict construction, a postponement of the day of the election, a month, or a day, would have the same effect as the election of a new class."

Notwithstanding the paramount right of interpretation of the Constitution, the right of the Senate to amend the Constitution is not denied by the 5th article of the Constitution.

The Senate is authorized to amend the Constitution in the same manner in which it is amended by the Convention. Thus, without confirmation by the Senate, the Constitution is amended in the same manner as if it were amended by the Convention.

A constitutional amendment is not a technical construction like a contract. It is a political construction. It is to be interpreted as to carry out the great principle of the government—not to defeat them, but to aid them in the manner of their operation.

Therefore, wherever it is not said that the act shall be performed in the manner of their operation, it is to be interpreted as to carry out the great principle of the government—not to defeat them, but to aid them in the manner of their operation.

To suppose that the provisions in the 9th section of the Constitution are intended to give to the body a controlling power over the public, expressed by the adoption of the amendments, it would have been an abuse of power which the convention had no right to make.

It is impossible for the people to express their will by means of a majority of the body of the House of Representatives, and to have the amendments of the Constitution made by the body of the House of Representatives.

What claims upon the confidence of American democrats has that politician, who in this free country attempts to press upon the people a U. S. Bank, by ignoring the example of the British Government?

President Lincoln has failed every anticipation, which has been formed by those who created it. President Jackson pronounced the edict that it must fail, and it did fail in the face of an immense majority of the people of the United States.

CLAY AND THE BANK.—That those who vote for Mr. Clay for President vote for a U. S. Bank, is a fact which Mr. Clay himself will not attempt to deny, though some of his friends affect to deny it.

But the true and only efficacious and permanent remedy, I solemnly believe, is to be found in a BANK OF THE UNITED STATES.

The Gazette cannot see its error on C. C. CLAY, and acknowledges that it was not that gentleman who made the profane language attributed to him by the Standard. It is not that gentleman, but Henry Clay.

But Henry Clay would not admit that he had used the profane language attributed to him, but that he had used the language of a man who was not a member of the community which he was addressing.

The meeting having ascertained that Wilson M. CAVANAUGH, our city, was to be loudly called for, and with the prospect of a good meeting, responded to the call in a powerful speech in favor of the democratic candidates.

Wilson M'CAULEY. This gentleman, whose name heads the Democratic Ticket in this State, was in our town last week, and was most eloquently received.

We see from the proceedings published that there has been an enthusiastic meeting for the Democratic Ticket, held in the city of Columbus, Ohio.
