no clue to the perpetrators being obtained, though the officers of the bank, or some one of them, were believed by the public, to have been privy to the transa tion. On the 11th inst. however, the whole of the stolen money was accidentally discovered in a tomb in the burying ground of Columbia. It had been deposited with the seal of the budget avidently unbroken, as it came from the bank, in a canotaphabore a grave, where it had been protocted from rain. In a damp, atmosphere, however, much of the money both at the bottom and top of the packet was in a state of complete decay. The Observer says, thus after a lapse of ten years this profound mystery has been so far revealed as to remove a suspicion which has rested like a blight and milder on the characters of those whom mone openic accused but whom very few were found to excused; and the innocent and injured stand vindicated before them.—Baltimore Clipper.

Suicide, Elopement and Fatal Quarrel.—On the 11th inst. Mr. Henry Dalrymple committed suicide in Stockton, N. Y., by shooting himself, because his father left his property to a brother instead of himself. He was given to intemperance. On the night following, a respectable young lady at the same town, of the name of Todd, eloped from her father's house to follow a chap to whom she had been engaged to be married, but which ceremony had been broken off in consequence of his being taken up for larceny, had left will run as a regular packet between Suicide, Elopement and Fatal Quarrel .- On th sequence of his being taken up for larceny, had left his bail, and absconded.
