Bris family coach and fat coach-horses, looking like emblems of peace and plenty, stopped at my door. 1 loved to measure his men for their liveries! Then was a world of good living, sir, in their dimensions The body coachman and gouty old footman must have weighed together nigh forty stone. He had two sons, had the old gentleman-likely Itule fellows as you'd wish to see, in their sugar loa oned jackets, and nankeen trousers; and by the time I had to stand on tiptoe while trying them on young men of what is called the highest promise.

Old Foster couldn't be worth less than a hundred thou sand pounds, and he had only a couple of daughters to provide for in additition to his handsome sons, (one, east, of whom was sure of his share in the house at least, of whom was sure of his share in the house of business,) they might be considered as easy for life. I, God knows, considered them so and was always careful to somply with their whims, and be quactual to their orders. Besides, they were good-dooking youths, who did honor to my shop. You may not think it of much moment, sir, but I can tell you we travellors love to work for a man who is as wel made as his coat! "You see the fat footman and fat coachman were apt to gossip of their master's affairs, when they came about their plush waistcoats and velveteens, as servants whether fat or lean, are apt to do more especially about Christmas time, when the family accounts being sent in family tradesmen are obliged to stand a glass or two as a token of respect to the servants halk and it was the opinion of old Foster's people that he would divide the property between his two sons, having the oldest to succeed him in his business. The young men. however, were not equally favorites with the old servants. There was no end of faults to be found with Master Harry, or, as he was now be-ginning to be called, 'Mister Henry!'—Mister Henry kept them up late at nights—Mister Henry was himself late of mornings—Mister Henry required more brushing of coats and polishing of boots than any ten Mister Henries in the land. Mister Henry professed that he would soener walk ten miles in the rain than undergo the penance of the family coach; Mister Henry had been heard to speak disparagingly of the home-browed of Bedford Row!—whereas the elder-born browed of Bedford Row!—whereas the elder-both, the hope of the house, was a model young man—early to bed and early to rise—unimpeachable in morals, and so farfrom giving three pair of boots a day to be warned, much addicted to gaiters. Yet such is the perversity of human nature, sir, that Henry was ten to one the favorite. The fat footman used to perjure to conset from the ald his precious soul in trying to conceal from the old man the indecent hours of the young scapegoal "John Foster, the elder brother, did his best, as per haps in duty bound, to prevent his father from being rived on such points. For it was doubtless for Henry's good, that he should be duly reproved; and though it was likely enough to banish him from the old gentleman's good books to learn that he was getting pretty deep into other people's, his brother took care that the amount of his debts should be no secret in that the amount Bedford Row.

'Don't suspect me, sir, of having aided or abetted this. I protest to you, that, from the time the young gentleman lived upon an allowance, many was the Christmas I let pass without doing more than add up the account of Mr Henry. For I know well enough, backwardness of the son.

"And to say the truth, like the old servants, I felt vance:

something of a weakness in favor of that young man! He was so good-looking, so affable, so pleasant, -he had such a way with him, as the saying is, that his faults were readily excused. For, as bad a paymaster ade him the laughing stock of his acquaintance, in to his father. But I pacified her by assuring her he would pay me in the lump; and bade her take care how she slew the old goose in Bedford Row, for the sake of a few golden eggs.
