Gentlement-Having had an opportunity but for a few minutes to see a copy of the paper which has been read, it cannot be expected that I should make a longthened reply to it. The occasion forbids me to say less than this, that I know not whether any testimonial which I have ever received from the hands of my fellow citizens during the course of a long and somewhat varied life, has filled me with livelier emotions of gratitude. Replete as your address is with expressions of confidence, and respect and cordial good will, and emanating as it does from persons of the highest standing in their several pursuits, and the highest character for respectability and usefulness, it is sufficient to touch a much colder heart than I trus bents within my own bosom. No one, my fellow citizens, deplores more than I, the melancholy occasion which has caused our meeting together this day. The just language which you have employed in characterizing the recent insurjection of a portion of our citizens against ou. wholesome an tary laws, meets my hearty approbation; while the firm determination you evince to put down and banish such dangerous excesses, will, I hope, suitably er courage and strengthon the arms of those whose duty it is to take the lead in this arduous but necessary work. I cheerfully join in the applause which you bestow on the gallant and highly praiseworthy conduct of the military and the citizens who have lent their aid in suppressing these disturbances. It is calculated to fill the hearts of all who love the laws of their countr with the highest admiration for these distinguished men. And I here embrace the opportunity to say that I sincerely hope, that after our troubles shall have been quinted, suitable measures will be adopted to com -memorate this conduct.

Allow me once more, my fellow citizens, to thank you for the kind reception you have given me; and the aid in maintaining the laws you have so promptly readered. I shall take great pleasure in co-operating with not wish to become yearly subscribers, at the following yen to effect the important objects which you desire rates, to be paid to the carriers, or at the office, in adto accomplish.
