DENNING'S FIRE PROOF IRON CHESTS
PITTSBURGH, Oct. 22, 1842.
J Denning: On Friday, the 30th of last month, about 9 o'clock at night, the Planing, Grooving, and Sash Manufactory, owned by Gay, Dilworth & Co., with a large quantity of dressed and undressed lumber, was all consumed by fire.
The Iron Safe which I bought of you some time back was in the most exposed situation during the fire, and was entirely red hot. I am pleased to inform you it was opened at the close of the fire, and all books, papers, &c., saved;—this is the best recommendation I can give of the utility of your safes.

The Daily Morning Post.

The Tragedy of the Till.

There was a man called Isaac Pugwash, a dweller in a miserable slough of London; a squalid denizen of one of the foul nooks of that city of Plutus. He kept a shop which, though small as a cabin, was visited as granary and store-house by half the neighborhood.—All the creature-comforts of the poor—from bread to that questionable superfluity, small-beer—were sold by Isaac. Strange it was, that with such a trade, Pugwash grew not rich. He had many bad debts; and of all shop-keepers, was most unfortunate in false coin. Certain it is, he had neither eye nor ear for bad money. Counterfeit semblances of Majesty beguiled him out of bread, and butter, and cheese, and red herring, just as readily as legitimate royalty struck at the mint. Malice might impute something of this to the political principles of Pugwash, who, 'tis said avowed himself again and again was no lover of a monarchy. Nevertheless, I cannot think Pugwash had so little regard for the countenance of majesty, as to welcome it as readily when silvered copper as when sterling silver. No, a wild, foolish enthusiast was Pugwash, but in the household matter of good and bad money he had very wholesome prejudices. He had a reasonable wish to grow rich, yet was entirely ignorant of the by-ways and short cuts to wealth. He would have sauntered through life with his hands in his pockets, and a daisy in his mouth; and dying with just enough in the house to pay the undertaker, would have thought himself a fortunate fellow; he was in the words of Mrs. Pugwash, such a careless, foolish, dreaming creature.—He was cheated every hour by a customer of some kind; and yet to deny credit to any body, he would as soon have denied the wife of his bosom. His customers knew the weakness, and failed not to exercise it. To be sure, now and then, fresh from conjugal counsel he would refuse to add a single herring to a debtor's score; no, he would not be sent to the workhouse by any body. A quarter of an hour after, the denied herring, with an added small loaf, was given to the little girl, sent to the shop by the rejected mother,—he couldn't bear to see poor children wanting anything.'

"Pugwash had another unprofitable weakness. He was fond of what he called nature, though in his dim, close shop, he could give her but a stifling welcome. Nevertheless, he had the earliest primroses on his counter—'they threw,' he said, 'such a nice light about the place.' A sly knavish customer presented Isaac with a pot of polyanthuses, and, won by the flowry gift, Pugwash gave the donor ruinous credit; the man with wall-flowers regularly stopt at Isaac's shop, and for only sixpence, Pugwash would tell his wife he had the place a Paradise. 'If we can't go to nature, Sally isn't it a pleasant thing to be able to bring nature to us?' Whereupon Mrs Pugwash would declare that a man with at least three children to provide for had no need to talk of nature. Nevertheless the flower man made his weekly call.

"It is a common thing, an old familiar cry," said the Hermit—"to see the poor man's florist, to hear his loud-voiced invitable to take his nosegays, his penny-roots; and yet is it a call, a conjurstion of the heart of man overlabored and despondng—walled in by the gloom of a town—divorced from the fields and their sweet healthful influences—almost shut from the sky that reeks in vapor over him—it is a call that tells him there are things in the earth besides food and covering to live for; and that God in his great bounty hath made them for all men.

"Thus considered, the loud-lunged city bawler of roots and flowers becomes a high benevolence, a perpatetic priest of nature. Adown dark lanes and miry alleys he takes sweet remembrances—touching reminds of the loveliness of earth, that with their bright Looks and balmy odors cheer and uplift the dumpish heart of man; that make his soul stir within him, and acknowledge the beautiful. The penny, the ill-spared penny—for it would buy a wheaten roll—that the poor housewife pays for rout of primrose, is her offering to the hopeful loveliness of nature; is her testimony of the soul struggling with the blighting, crushing circumstances of sordid earth, and sometimes yearning towards earth's sweetest aspects. Amidst the vidence, the coarseness, and the suffering that may surround and defile the wretched, there must be moments when the heart escapes, craving for the innocent and lovely, when the soul makes for itself even of a flower a comfort and a refuge."

With no more sense than a buzzard, as Mrs. Pugwash said, for a good shilling, he was the victim of these laborious folks who made their money with a fine independence of the state, out of their own materials. It seemed the common compact of a host of coiners to put off their base-born offspring upon Isaac Pugwash; who, it must be confessed, bore the loss and the indignity like a Christian martyr. At last, however the spirit of the man was stung. A guinea, as Pugwash believed in statute gold, was found to be of less value than a brass button. Mrs. Pugwash cheered and screamed as though a besieging foe was at her house; Pugwash himself felt that further patience would be pusillanimity. Whereupon, sir, what think ye Isaac did? Why he suffered himself to be driven by the voice and vehemence of his wife to a conjurer, who in a neighboring attic was a sidereal go-between to the neighborhood—a vender of intelligence from the stars to all who sought and duly feed him. This magician would declare to Pugwash the whereabout of the felon-coiner, and—the thought was an anodyne to the hurt mind of Isaac's wife—the knave would be law throttled.

Poor Pugwash seeks the conjurer who professes to believe that his visitor's soul is in a very bad state for money-making. To ascertain if this be the case he bids him exhibit the interiors of his breeches' pockets.

"Turn out your breeches' pockets," said Lotus—and the miserable Pugwash immediately displayed the linings. "Humph!" cried Lotus, looking narrowly at the brown Holland whereof they were made—"very bad indeed; very bad; never knew a soul in a worse state in my life.'

'Pugwash looked at his pockets, and then at the conjurer; he was about to speak, but the fixed, earnest look of Father Lotus held him in respectful silence.

"'Yes, yet," said the wizard, still eyeing the linings Holland, "I can see it all; a vagabond soul; a wandering here and there, like a pauper without a settlement; a ragamuffin soul."

"Pugwash found confidence and breath. Was there ever such a joke!" he cried: "know a man's soul by the lingings of his breeches pockets!" and Pugwash laughed, albeit uncomfortable.

"Pence,' said the wizard, 'and answer me. You'd have this soul of your's cured?'

"If there's any thing the matter with it, answered Pugwash. 'Though not of any conceit I speak it, yet I think it as sweet and as healthy a soul as the souls of neighbors. I never did wrong to anybody.'

"Pooh!' cried Father Lotus.

"'I never denied credit to the hungry,' continued Pugwash.

"'Fiddle-de-dee!' said the wizard, very nervously. "'I never laid out a penny in law upon a customer.'

I never refused small beer to——'

"'Silence!' cried Father Lotus. 'Don't offend philosophy by thus boasting of your goodness. You are in a perilous condition; still you may be saved.'

"'A very nice thing,' said Pugwash, 'though I can do with as little of it as most folks.'

"Father Lotus shook his head. 'Well, and the world about you!'

"'A beautiful world,' said Pugwash, 'and I can't leave the shop as often as I would, or even I'd shut in all day long, I may say, a prisoner to brickdust herrings, and bacon. Sometimes, when the sun shines and the cobbler's lark sings the way clears as if he'd split his pipe, why then, do you know, I do so long to get into the fields; I do hunger for a bit of grass like any cow.'

"The wizard look almost hopelessly on Pugwash, 'And that's religion and business? Infidel o' the counter! Saracen of the till!' However—patience,' said
