The following Hymn, written by Charles F. Hill, is published in the "Hymn Book for the Old Folks."

We have assembled here - A Brotherhood - To sing the feeble hymn - With full hearts we stand - Seeking, with heart and hand - The greatest good.

Not for a fond display - Come you up here to-day - An old hymn - For no unmeaning rhyme - No purpose vain and light - We'll sing our powers united - To swell the song.

A higher duty calls - To consecrate these walls - We gather here - To praise our high and pure - To love that shall endure - To sing - forever yours - The choir.

And may this sacred home - Be ever and forever - Forever yours - Here may your prayers dwell - Here may your praises swell - Here may your love be kindled - To swell the song.

This, in this noble strife - Throughout this mortal life - Each hour improves - Then, called to leave this sphere - With a true faith and hope - May every member join - To swell the song.

ORIGINAL LETTER FROM AN ARDENT BUT JEALOUS LOVER.

The following expostulatory letter was picked up near the corner of Washington and State streets, Boston, a few days ago. We copy it verbatim.

My dear lady, I have just been furnished in being "a little jealous."

dearest angel and lovely Sarah - Not having heard from you since day five yesterday - began to be very uneasy about you and was afraid that you had been taken sick and you complained of illness -
