to prove to the democratic party the popularity of its principles with the people and to give assurance to the bonest democrat of the glorious victory that his party will achieve in the coming contest.

The first response was from LOUISIANA, a State in which the federalists made the most desperate efforts, and to which Mr Clay himself performed a pilgrimage and violated the sanctity of the Sabbath, in endeavoring to arouse the drooping spirits of his partizans, was the first that cast a damper upon the whigs and gave an increased democratic vote. Even the local election
