THE subscribers of this hold and restitutive article, which from its entrance on public life until its death, was a continual scene of adversity. The years he lived at Nassau were full with intrigue of a personal character, but from the time he left the United States in 1807 until 1835, he never resided in any other place than the Island of New Providence. The facts in his life are those of a man who lives on one of the Salsky, Bahama Islands, who read law with Bleeker, and afterwards his partner, for some years, where he passed under his true name of Lewis Carr, and often told this history of his life and connection with Col. Burr, and that it was of this article, who was at Kingston, Jamaica, and at Salsky Island last summer, one week, has no doubt of the truth of the foregoing narrative. The facts and circumstances of his connection with Col. Burr, were fully detailed so that there was no room in doubt that Mr. Bleeker's statements were really the true Lewis Carr. He is not now in France, neither did he ever live in Montreal.

Let each reader deal honestly on the ugly form of the man who made a democratic "rotter, real and fall." There is a "bald-headed" however—the shadow of a murdered man—murdered by cowardly hands, compassed and murdered by Henry Clay—who will follow the man who shot and the man who wrote the challenge, till they too, "rotter, real and fall." sep 10-ly

A man named George Shaw was arrested in New York, on Thursday, in answer to a challenge of Bleeker. It appears that he advertised in the newspapers for a person to attend his store, to whom he would give a small salary. A Mr. Willson came, and about 9 o'clock at night, the Planning, Growing and Bush Manufactory, owned by Gay, Dilworth & Co., was a large quantity of dressed and undressed lumber, was all consumed by fire. The Iron Safe which I bought of you some time back was in the most exposed situation during the fire, and was entirely ruined. I am pleased to inform you that it was at the store of the Rev. and all books, papers, &c. saved—by the recommendation I can give of the utility of your safe. THOMAS SCOTT. sep 10-ly

THE following article, copied from the Louisville Register, was written by a gentleman, who says the paper, "of high respectability," who had an opportunity of becoming acquainted with the facts related in his communication.

Who was Blennerhassett? and what has become of him? Having lately seen in the New York and Philadelphia papers several vicious notices of this celebrated lawyer, with an apology which the writer of these notes offers for giving what he believes to be the true history of this man's career, and final exit from the custody of this world—which will be much easier to do than to write a highly-colored picture of things which never existed except in the fancy of some party engaged in party warfare, by which means the name of this man is believed to be authentic, and of the highest character. In the first place, who was Blennerhassett? In answer to this question, our informant is, that it was an assumed name by an individual whose true name was Lewis Carr, who was born in Ireland, as has always been stated. His family name was Lewis Carr, an elder brother filled the station of secretary to the governor of Calcutta, in the East Indies, to which place young Lewis went as an engineer in the engineer department, where he remained about two years, in which time he was engaged in several surveys and surveys, which finally engaged him to his commission, in the Island of Jamaica, where, he read law and commenced the practice, and also engaged in merchandising, by which means, and a secret connection with the vice-regent and pirates who frequented the West Indies, he made a considerable fortune, which he spent with great liberality. While engaged in this business, he frequently visited Mexico, and became acquainted with many of the leading men who were preparing the way of a revolution, which Carr foresaw must break out in a short time, and being a high principled foreigner, he was perpetually engaged in difficulties of one kind or another, until shortly before he came to the United States an intrigue with the Earl of Sandwich, the Earl of Sandwich, who was a member of the cabinet of the King of England, made that place too hot for him, and he sold out his property and came to the United States. He landed at New Orleans, and went thence to Louisville, Kentucky, where, in the season, he purchased some property, and finally located himself on the celebrated island in the Ohio river, near Marietta. This move took place about the year 1803 or 1804. When he reached New Orleans he assumed the name of Blennerhassett. The beautiful and accomplished lady who accompanied and lived with him was not a native. She was young, and had many fascinating accomplishments, which it is to be regretted were not fully known to her countrymen. Her name was Catherine Blennerhassett, and she had a high opinion of her own beauty and talents. She was young, and had many fascinating accomplishments, which it is to be regretted were not fully known to her countrymen. Her name was Catherine Blennerhassett, and she had a high opinion of her own beauty and talents.

After their projected invasion of Mexico had failed, and Blennerhassett had broken up at this island, he returned to New Orleans, where he left the lady who had been his companion, and she returned to the Island of New Providence, one of the Bahamas in the West Indies, and settled in Nassau, its capital, and in 1812 she died. She was a sister of the late Governor of Louisiana, and she had a high opinion of her own beauty and talents.
