On the conclusion of the reading of the letter, q ay delegate. Mr L R Ashhurst, moved that the Bishis resignation be accepted. It was then that the ifference of opinion in the Convention became many fest. Two courses, alone, stood open. The first was, to refuse to accept, and either to take measures for presentment and trial, or to let the matter rest forever. The second, was to except the resignation, and thus revent, on the one side, the necessity of a protracted xumination, and remove, on the other, the possibility f further offence. The first proposition was supported y the two extremes,-by those who considered that a public trial was necessary, and by those who thought iat the Bishop was no more to be censured than if ho
