'60,000 PROPLE IN COUNCIL!'-This is the of the Gazette's account of the procession. Never did we see a more wilful and atrocious misrepresentation in print. We would not be surprised if he had told a · falsehood as great about a matter wherein few could detect him. But here is a statement that every delegate to the Convention and every person else who saw the show, will know to be monstrously false. We deny that it approaches the truth, and defy the Gazette to produce some data that may go to substantiate his assertion. We dare him to publish the results of the various counts made by the committee who were to ascertain which delegations should get the banners. This would be the only way to arrive at the truth. We dare him to publish these counts, - and see, when they are summed up, whether they show one half-or one fourth-or even one tenth of his estimate,

Supposing that 4121 persons, the whole number that voted for the whig candidate for Congress in this county last year, each with a lady, had been on the ground, -and suppose that the twelve other counties of Pennsylvania from which they expected delegates, had sent two thousand each, and that Ohio and Virginia had each sent a thousand, the Convention would still have fallen nearly 26,000 short of the Gazette's estimate! Again-suppose a number had been present equal to the whole vote Harrison got in 1840 in Allegheny, Armstrong, Fayette, Green, Indiana, Bedford, Westmoreland, Washington, Beaver, Butler, Mercer and Cambria counties in Pennsylvania; Ohio and Brooke counties, in Virginia, and Jefferson and Columbiana counties in Ohio, still about THIR FEEN THOUSAND would have been wanting to make up the Gazette's
