Well may the Irish people and the true friends of Ireland overywhere rejoice exceedingly. In what form this deliverance is to come To the whigs this is a sad and gloomy result-their hopes are disappointed and defeated. They had made themselves believe they would have 4000, and so as sured their friends abroad—and some of them, really thought they would have 4500. They knew how severely they had toiled, and how lavishly they had expended money in carrying on the campaign. They had, in their assults on the democratic candidate, sa crificed truth honor, and decency, and they fondly ho-ped that success would console them for the loss of the good opinion of every honest and decent man, ome, we are bonest and decent man, from the pride of power in the abstract, or as a princi-
